Rogers Pass Route Encouraging—Winters

Both the federal and provincial governments are "encouraged" at the prospect of carving the last remaining link of the Trans-Canada Highway in B.C. through Rogers Pass, between Revelstoke and Golden, Federal Works Minister Robert Winters said today.

Mr. Winters said initial surveys on the route are "promising," and that Ottawa would favor its selection as one of the "gaps" in the national highway to be filled by the minister's recent offer of 90 per cent of construction costs.

The offer, made at the recent T-C conference in Ottawa, calls for the federal government to pay 90 per cent of cost on 10 per cent of remaining construction in all provinces.

B.C. was faced with the difficulty of bridging the gap between Revelstoke and Golden on the T-C. The Big Bend route is in the way of huge hydro-electric projects planned for the area.

Surveys are now underway on the Rogers Pass route, with the federal government splitting the cost of them with B.C.

Selection of the route would mean that Ottawa would pay 100 per cent of the construction costs for 20 miles through Glacier National Park, out of a total of 90 miles.

On the remaining 70 miles, Ottawa would pay 90 cents on the dollar.

LITTLE SUPPORT
Mr. Winters did not indicate much support for B.C. Highway Minister P. A. Gagliardi's recent demand for $7,500,000 from the federal government

SPEAKS TONIGHT

Federal Works Minister Robert Winters will address the Laurier Club at the Monterey at 6:15 tonight. His speech will be rebroadcast at 9:05 to-night over radio station CKDA. Following the Laurier address, the minister will go to Liberal party headquarters on Government Street to meet party supporters in the Greater Victoria area.

U.K. Ready to Discuss Ban on H-Bomb Tests

Elections Scheduled For France

Faure Forces Dissolution

PARIS (AP)—The French government tonight decided to order dissolution of the national assembly.

The decision was announced after a 3½-hour cabinet meeting at the Elysee Palace. There was no immediate announcement on the date of new elections.

Holding a confidence vote on a procedural question—but actually moving to stave off the early parliamentary balloting—the assembly overthrew the government Tuesday night, 318 to 218. But by their whopping majority against Faure, the over-enthusiastic deputies made it possible for the cabinet to oust them from office under a constitutional clause never applicable before.

Article 51 of the 1946 constitution says that when two cabinets have been thrown out within 18 months by "constitutional majorities"—more than half the assembly's 625 members—the cabinet can dissolve the assembly. Pierre Mendes-France was ousted from the premiership less than 10 months ago.

The constitution says the cabinet's decision to dissolve must be taken with the president of the republic presiding and after advice has been received from the president of the assembly.

MEET FOR HOUR

Pierre Schmitter, assembly president, spent more than an hour Tuesday night with President Rene Coty at Elysee Palace. Reports said Schmitter declined to give his advice until after consultations with party leaders in the assembly today. After these talks he said he would make his recommendations to Coty in a letter.

The cabinet then decided to order the assembly dissolved. The constitutional requires that new elections be held within 20 to 30 days. That would put the balloting around Christmas, a time certain to be unpopular with the voters.

Argentine Frees Famed Newspaper

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—The government today issued a decree restoring the newspaper La Prensa to the Paz family. At the same time it ordered dissolution of the Peronista party.

The decree of provisional president Pedro Aramburu spelled a finish to the totalitarian political machine which Juan D. Peron organized six years ago to smother the opposition and tighten his reign. Expropriation of La Prensa in 1951 was one of the steps Peron took to clamp his control on the nation.

The return of the 81-year-old newspaper to its rightful owners came only 18 days after Aramburu took office.

SEIZED FIVE YEARS AGO

Almost five years ago, the Peron government engineered its expropriation by Congress and handed it over to his organized labor supporters.

Its publisher before expropriation, Dr. Alberto Gainza Paz, is expected to return from exile Thursday to resume control of the newspaper.

The Aramburu decree ordered the federal administrator at the paper to turn over all properties to Gainza Paz, abolished the expropriation law of 1950 and ordered all legal proceedings against the Paz family dropped.

It is expected the newspaper will be closed down for inventory for several days before it resumes publication.

Several times since Peron's downfall in the September revolution it has been reported that the provisional government would abolish the Peronista party.

When Peron fell, his party held all seats in the Senate and all but 12 in the 155-seat Chamber of Deputies, virtually all judgeships and nearly all local and provincial posts.

Change in Plan Asked

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C. (CP)—City council of this north-central British Columbia port will attempt to persuade Frohisher Ventures Ltd. to use Prince Rupert as the outlet for its proposed $50,000,000 hydro power and metals industry, rather than Alice Arm, B.C.

Eden Lays Down Basis for Talks With U.S., Russia

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Eden said today the government is "perfectly ready to consider" Russia's proposal for an immediate world-wide ban on nuclear weapon tests, but cautioned Parliament against expecting unconditional British acceptance.

Eden told the Commons the terms and scope of the Russian offer, broadcast by Moscow radio, "are far from clear."

Russia offered to halt nuclear weapon tests if Britain and the United States would do the same.

Eden said the Soviet offer "might have appeared in a better light if it had been made before the recent Soviet explosion of which Mr. Krushchev has spoken" in such enthusiastic terms.

He referred to the comments by Nikita Krushchev, Soviet Communist party secretary, in India last Saturday that Russia recently exploded a hydrogen bomb which confirmed calculations that Russian scientists "are able to produce with minimum atomic energy a maximum explosion."

WON'T COMMIT CABINET

Eden refused to commit the government to accepting or rejecting the Labor party proposal that Britain should initiate talks with the United States and Russia with a view to ending further experimental H-bomb tests.

The prime minister was answering a question from Clement Attlee, leader of the Labor party.

Earlier, 16 Labor MPs submitted a resolution calling on the government to halt further atomic and hydrogen bomb tests and to urge the United States and Russia to do likewise.

In his reply, Eden said Russia has made no official approach to Britain on the subject.

Eden went on: "Her Majesty's government are ready to discuss these matters at any time, but I must make it clear that in such discussions regard will have to be paid to the number and nature of the tests which each country had already made."

He added amid the cheers of his own supporters: "It remains the view of Her Majesty's government that a comprehensive disarmament agreement is the only final solution to these problems."

TOTAL BAN SOVIET GOAL—KHRUSHCHEV

CALCUTTA (Reuters)—Nikita Khrushchev, visiting Russian Communist party chief, said today his government aims to compel the West to ban atomic weapons.

He told a public meeting that the Soviet Union stands for a ban on armaments, including atomic and hydrogen weapons, but that her policy has not received proper support from Western countries.

U.K. Papers Favor Plan

LONDON (AP)—The renewed Soviet proposal for world-wide renunciation of further H-bomb tests drew support today from several British newspapers.

The News Chronicle and The Daily Herald, Liberal and Labor supporters, respectively, urge acceptance of the Soviet proposal, made via Moscow radio Tuesday.

Another Liberal paper, The Manchester Guardian, expresses approval of a "limited" agreement to cease nuclear bomb tests provided it is not dependent on prior conclusion of a comprehensive disarmament agreement.

The Daily Telegraph, Conservative, notes cautiously that a proposal to stop H-bomb tests "for some time has been part of Russian disarmament schemes. But cessation of tests was always put forward as part of a 'package deal,' the concluding phase of which would be abolition of nuclear weapons."

MANILA (AP)—Toll of an unseasonal tropical storm was raised today to 128 dead, scores missing and widespread destruction in the southern and central Philippines.

$1,200,000 Sidney Breakwater Asked in Brief to Minister

A Sidney delegation today presented a brief to federal works minister Robert Winters asking for construction of a $1,200,000 breakwater and other marine facilities.

The delegation was led by M. R. Eaton, president of the Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce, and H. Bradley, chairman of the village commission.

Major-General G. R. Pearkes, VC, MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, and Victoria MP Dr. F. T. Fairley supported the brief.

It called for construction of a breakwater to protect the port, immediate construction of a ramp leading to the wharf with a larger capacity, installation of additional dolphins to permit ferries to land in all weather, and construction of protected floats to handle visiting yachts.

Mr. Winters drove to Sidney following presentation of the brief, to get a first-hand look at the situation.

The Sidney delegation stressed the need for a new federal building in the growing village, and said that existing post office facilities "act as a serious deterrent" to expansion.

It said the facilities for yachts are "judiciously inadequate," and that valuable visiting vessels are "in peril" when they put in at Sidney.

Paris Dentists 'Out'

The dentists were protesting against payments fixed by the French social security system for their work which, they claim, are too low.

The medallion was accompanied by a message from the President hailing the retired Prime Minister as "a towering leader in the quest for peace as you were in the battle for freedom through the dark days of war."

JUDGE RULES SHE CAN

Be He Ever So Wary She'll Still be Stary

CHICAGO (AP)—A judge has given Harriet Davis permission to attend any church she pleases, thus freeing her to hunt down an organizer who can't stand the way she stares at him.

The case of the reluctant organizer and the staring spinster had been in court for the last nine months. Tuesday Judge Julius Miner dissolved an injunction which prevented Miss Davis, 35, from attending any church where organizer Robert Metzler, 50, is employed.

Metzler obtained the injunction last March, charging that Miss Davis and her mother followed him from church to church, sat in front pews and stared at him.

This made him fidgety and he skipped notes in hymns, he said. Metzler said he quit his job in a Chicago church and found employment at a church in suburban Glenview to get away from the women, but that they followed him there. The women simply explained that Metzler's music affects them.

"I have an entirely different emotional reaction when I hear him play," Miss Davis said.

Judge Miner declared: "If there is any disturbance in the church, the church has its remedies in the police courts, not by injunctions. I have no power to keep people out of church, regardless of their motives."

Never have so many owed so much to just one. Cheers, Sir Winston.

Well, anyway it's nice to know that our side's willin' not to blow th' world up if th' other side won't.

AT ECONOMIC COMMISSION

Lumbermen Oppose Protective Tariffs

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer
VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia's big forest industries joined today to oppose high protective tariffs for Canadian manufacturers and urged the federal government keep hands off international competition in Canadian coastal shipping trade.

At the same time, the industries charged their shippers have been forced to absorb an unduly big share of costs in subsidizing low freight charges on Prairie export grain and demanded an "equitable solution" be found.

Appearing before the Gordon economic commission, spokesman for B.C.'s lumbermen, loggers, pulp, paper and shingle producers forecast rising production and markets during the next 20 years.

But they expressed concern over high transportation costs and the impact of growing labor power on B.C. wage levels, considered by the industries as the highest in Canada.

The $1,000,000,000 B.C. industries turn out about one-quarter of Canada's forest products. They account for almost half of B.C.'s entire economic production.

They thus form one of the major groups to appear before the five-man federal commission charged with the job of forecasting the shape of the Canadian economy during the next quarter-century.

The commission, headed by Walter Gordon of Toronto, has mapped out three days of hearings here as the final stop in a three-week western tour that took it from Winnipeg to Victoria.

90-YEAR SUPPLY ON COAST
The forestry spokesman estimated B.C. holds about 132,200,000,000 cubic feet of mature timber. At present cutting rates, this was sufficient to provide a 90-year supply on the coast and a 260-year supply in the interior.

Though the industries expressed aim was to control harvesting to provide a well-managed sustained annual forestry yield, they felt there was no need of restricting overall cutting "until the bulk of the mature timber has been harvested."

The industries predicted brighter, bigger markets for forest products in the years ahead, but they believed Canada will still depend on her export markets, particularly the United States, for the bulk of her sales. Because of the reliance on export channels, they were opposed to protective tariffs for Canadian manufactured goods, fearing it might lead to retaliatory tariff curbs imposed on the raw products from Canadian forests.

Transportation and labor costs were among the industries' major headaches. They observed that some Canadian groups want to restrict Canadian coastal shipping to Canadian ships. They felt this would injure Britain's ability to earn dollars to buy Canadian goods. Under an existing agreement, the British merchant marine can compete for cargoes between Canadian ports.

Another problem was that of the statutory low rail charges on Prairie grain moved to export markets. The industries felt a big share of the railways' losses in these low charges has been shifted on the shoulders of B.C. forestry shippers.

If a subsidy on grain shipments is required, all Canadians should share the bill, the forestry operators argued. An equitable solution had to be found.

Wage costs were high in B.C. The industries underwent serious strikes in previous years and observed that amalgamation of Canada's two major labor bodies into a single congress will bring increased power to B.C. forestry trade unions. Under single control, they would represent almost one-third of all B.C. organized workers.

WILD ALASKA JET SNUFFS 15 LIVES

Roaring Plane Smashes Row of Houses; Year-Old Triplets Among Dead; Many Hurt

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP)—A jet fighter plane, roaring out of control on a takeoff, mowed a deadly fire-strewn path through six big Eielson air force base housing units Tuesday and wiped out at least 13 lives.

Two more persons were believed among the dead. The victims included year-old triplets whose parents and two brothers were spared. Six of eight persons treated after the crash and fire received critical injuries. Possibly a score of firemen and volunteers suffered from frostbite in the 16-below-zero weather.

Roaring along a few feet above the ground at an estimated 150 miles an hour, the F-84 piloted by Lieut. Alfred F. Pounders, 28, veered at almost a 90-degree angle as it left the runway, witnesses said.

It soared over installations of the base for about a quarter of a mile, then plowed into the housing area. Rudy Hammer, an electrical engineer employed at the air base, saw the plane thundering toward the six eight-unit apartment houses.

BOUNCES ON BUILDINGS
"The plane bounced on one building, throwing it all into flames," Hammer recounted. "Then it bounced on another building and a wing flew off. Then it ripped down a high-tension power line. From there it smashed right through an apartment house and scattered everywhere, crashing into a parking lot and wrecking cars."

Debris from the smashed buildings covered the whole two-block area in which they stood. Confusion was compounded as residents and volunteers ran about attempting to salvage articles from the buildings.

The tremendous force of the impact sent apartment fuel tanks hurtling through the air, feeding the fires which had broken out in all the buildings.

Miss Pamela Harris, 21-year-old Eielson resident who had just alighted from a bus a short distance away, said the oil tanks burst like bombs, and she saw the flames engulf one group of school children coming home for lunch. She never learned what happened to them.

TRIPLETS NOT FOUND

The triplets, children of Sgt. and Mrs. William Fimple, occupied a front room in the first building struck. No trace of them was found hours after the plane struck. Nine bodies, all unidentified but including one believed to be that of the pilot, were found when the flames had been subdued by firemen and volunteers in a four-hour struggle. The below-zero weather hampered the firefighting and the subsequent search of the ice-clad ruins.

Sgt. and Mrs. Fimple were listed as injured. Their two other children, Timmie and Dutchi, apparently escaped unscathed.

Also unscathed were army Lieut. R. E. Marshall, occupant of an apartment in one of the buildings, his wife and infant child.

"I was just coming up from the basement of our apartment when it happened," the infantry officer told a reporter. "I was knocked back downstairs. Our baby was on the bed next to the wall and it was thrown to the floor. The baby wasn't hurt. My wife was knocked over, too."

Within a few moments after the crash, fire equipment from the air base and some 500 to 600 volunteers were fighting the flames or carrying on rescue work.

Many of the rescue workers were air force men whose families lived in the damage area. Most of them had no idea for hours whether their families were safe.

CROSS-COUNTRY PULP LINES NEXT?

VANCOUVER (CP)—You've heard about pipelines for oil and natural gas, but how about pipelines for pulp?

The British Columbia forestry industries told the Gordon economic commission today they are looking for just that kind of thing: Pipelines for wet wood pulp.

"At the present time, pulp manufactured in B.C. is, in many cases, dried, and then shipped to converting plants in the United States and this dry pulp is then made into wet pulp all over again."

"Obviously, this is economically wasteful."

Part-Time School Doctor To Be Hired

A part-time school doctor will be employed by Victoria-Esquamalt Union Board of Health until a permanent assistant medical health officer is appointed.

Victoria-Esquamalt Union Board of Health decided on the step Tuesday to free medical health officer Dr. Elizabeth Mahaffey to administrative tasks.

Dr. Mahaffey devoted most of her time to the schools before being promoted to MHO.

Provision will be made in the 1956 budget for appointment of a full-time assistant MHO.

A tentative 1956 budget of $110,756 for 1956 was submitted to the board.

City manager C. C. Wyatt said it was incomplete and lacked necessary detail. He said it should be re-drawn along the same lines as the city budget, where department heads confer with the city comptroller.

The board agreed to refer the budget to Mr. Wyatt to be handled in the normal City Hall procedure.

British Rule in Cyprus Doomed Says Archbishop

NICOSIA, Cyprus (Reuters)—Archbishop Makarios, leader of rebellious Cypriots seeking union with Greece, today accused Britain of imposing a "totalitarian regime" on Cyprus by proclaiming a state of emergency.

"British rule in Cyprus is doomed," declared the fiery prelate in his first public comment on the state of emergency proclaimed Saturday by British Governor Sir John Harding.

Makarios made a long reference to the proclamation and the Cypriots' struggle for union with Greece during a St. Andrew's Day sermon in a suburban church.

"The emergency regulations mean that all freedoms are abolished, human rights trampled and personal freedom banished," he said. "Everyone of us is now at the mercy of the first policeman or first British soldier who may lead us to a detention camp without charge, without trial, without proof of guilt."

RUSSIA LEGALIZES ABORTIONS

MOSCOW (UP)—Russia legalized abortions in state medical institutions today in an apparent attempt to make planned parenthood more desirable.

The decision reversed long-standing Soviet policy on the subject.

Today's action in effect restored the principle of "voluntary motherhood" which was enunciated in the early years after the revolution and rejected in 1936.

'Pops' Group Planning Free Concerts

First large-scale weekly rehearsal of Victoria "Pops" Symphony was held Tuesday night by members of Victoria Symphony Orchestra and others interested in light symphonic orchestration.

Musicians are from all walks of life and are conducted by Miss Dorothy Hopgood, Victoria high schools music director. About 30 turned out for practice at the Broad Street symphony office, including housewives, students, teachers and naval bandmen.

FREE CONCERTS

The group will hold free public concerts, said president and concertmaster Arne Bo, second violinist with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

He said the group formed after the regular symphony season ended last spring and several members wished to continue playing such compositions as "Swedish Rhapsody," "Moulin Rouge," Tchaikowsky's Fifth Symphony, "Poet and Peasant Overture," "Emperor Waltz" and "Blue Tango."

Honorary president James Fraser is second violin leader in the senior orchestra, with 37 years' professional experience.

New members, especially for string and reed sections, will be welcomed to the pops orchestra, said Mr. Bo.

Private Firm May Replace City Solicitor, Prosecutor

Plans to replace retiring city solicitor Arthur Patton and city prosecutor Alan Bigelow with the contracted services of a private legal firm were reported underway today.

City manager C. C. Wyatt, at request of finance committee has called for tenders. Legal firms have been invited to submit bids before Dec. 14.

The flat-rate bids are expected to cover cost of maintaining a legal clerk at City Hall to act as liaison with the firm which accepts the work.

When any bids received are compared with existing legal operation costs, the finance committee will recommend to council for or against the new scheme.

Estimated cost of operating the city solicitor's department this year is $17,830. Cost to the city for maintaining a city prosecutor's office, a part-time occupation, is about $4,200.

HEES CONFIRMS TORY PARLEY FOR JAN. 16-18

OTTAWA (CP)—The three-day annual meeting of the Progressive Conservative party's national association, postponed from earlier this month, will be held here next Jan. 16-18. George Hees, association president, Tuesday confirmed the January dates which had been announced tentatively some time ago. The last annual meeting was in March, 1954.

A-Sub Cruises 25,000 Miles On First Fuel

WASHINGTON (AP)—The atomic submarine Nautilus now has accumulated about 25,000 miles of cruising, far more than any non-sailing ship ever traveled without taking aboard fuel.

It probably will be many thousands of miles and many months more before any major replenishment of the Nautilus' nuclear fuel will be required.

The land-based duplicate of the Nautilus' power plant, located at the Idaho test station at the United States Atomic Energy Commission, recently was shut down for fuel replenishment after 2½ years of operation.

Experts say that gives a general idea of what U.S. Navy's first nuclear submarine could do on her initial fuel supply. But they also caution that the consumption of the U-235 in the boat's "firebox" will depend to some extent on how fast she is run.

Loads placed on the Nautilus in high-speed underwater runs presumably exceed power demands made on the prototype reactor during the 2½-year testing of that engine.

AIM AT BETTER PLANTS

Rear-Admiral H. G. Rickover, chief of the AEC's naval reactors branch, said recently that the power plant in Idaho and that in the Nautilus are preliminary models. The aim, said Rickover, is to design future nuclear power plants for ships "which can last for an entire war without being refueled."

3 Policemen Sued For Victim's Funeral

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP)—The police commission here was told Monday three police officers have been summoned in civil action arising from the death of a 22-year-old airman, killed by a police bullet July 27, 1954.

Ronald Byers died of a bullet wound after a car in which he was a passenger ran through a road blockade, set up in an attempt to stop the speeding vehicle.

Constable Douglas Sanford told the police commission the Exchequer Court had issued a summons for the funeral and medical costs for Byers. He Jester Donna Peck, and fairy queen May Guthrie.

Bush Pilot Rescues Hurt Plane Passenger

KENORA, Ont. (BUP)—A veteran bush pilot, Rex Kiteley, completed a risky light landing on frozen Rayner Lake 60 miles northwest of here, Tuesday night to rescue Floyd Dayton, seriously injured passenger of a light plane which crashed shortly after taking off earlier in the day.

The less seriously injured pilot of the Piper J-3, A. Goulet of Lac Du Bonnet, Man., remained in a mining camp cabin at the lake. He was slated to be flown out today.

HEALTH BOARD OPPOSES END TO CHLORINATION

Victoria-Esquamalt Union Board of Health went on record Tuesday opposing the end of chlorination of local drinking water as recently proposed by Mayor Claude Harrison.

The motion came after chief sanitary inspector Elwood Gropp reported 41 per cent of 1955 tests at Japan Gulch reservoir showed presence of intestinal bacteria, 18 per cent at Humpback reservoir and 17 per cent at the Sooke supply outlet. He said accepted safe percentage was 10 per cent. After chlorination only four in almost 2,000 tests showed positive bacteria results.

Milk Inspection By City Preferred

Victoria-Esquamalt Union Board of Health will advise provincial health authorities it wants to maintain local control of milk inspection—at least until the province can guarantee as intensive control.

City milk inspector Donald Wakelyn told the board Tuesday the dairy branch of department of agriculture may take over control of milk quality, according to legislation now being drafted.

He said that before 1950 the provincial government had entered the field of quality control but due to inadequate staffs and improper inspections, the experiment had not been satisfactory.

He said the milk quality had improved when the city health department again took over in 1950.

Board member Richard Reeve said he would "resist every effort to have our privileges interfered with."

Chairman Coun. G. W. Sammon said that provincial salary scales did not indicate inspectors would be well qualified.

Ald. Austin Curtis and Ald. Robert Macmillan both agreed the board should first find out what level of service was contemplated by the government. Both wanted to keep the local system until the government offered one as reliable.

Young Hunter Lost 3 Days Found Unhurt

KAMLOOPS (CP)—A 20-year-old hunter missing in a mountain area 20 miles northwest of here was found Tuesday in good condition by a forestry search party.

Police said they were advised by radio that Donald Spiers was found in the Pass Lake area where he became separated from his father, Donald C. Spiers of Kelowna, and Robert Bloomfield.

More than 20 persons aided by jeeps joined in the search after the youth's father and partner heard three distress signals fired from a rifle late Sunday.

Heavy snow in the area at 2,700 feet altitude prevented use of a tracking dog, said RCMP.

Home From Moscow

OF ALL MR. PEARSON'S ADVENTURES his recent appearance in the Kremlin seems to have been the most remarkable. The Russian leaders, for some reason of their own, treated the Canadian foreign minister with a brutal frankness almost unique in the annals of diplomacy. Mr. Pearson thus comes home to tell the free world what "competitive co-existence" really means.

It means, as Mr. Pearson said on the radio the other night, that international communism is relying on the collapse of the free world without the necessity of a nuclear war. Mr. Khrushchev so informed Mr. Pearson in virtually these words.

The Kremlin made no secret of its calculations. It believes, says Mr. Pearson, that communism is strong, disciplined and patient. It can wait indefinitely for the break-up of the Western alliance. On the other hand, in Mr. Khrushchev's opinion, the West, though ostensibly strong at the moment, is undisciplined and impatient. It will not continue long to bear the costs and sacrifices of the cold war, now under way again after a brief interruption. Its allies will bicker among themselves and fall out. The great alliance, which alone stands in communism's way, will disintegrate, quickly or slowly.

Mr. Pearson takes this warning seriously and he has good reason for his alarm. The affairs of NATO certainly have not been going well. Such reliable observers as the correspondents of The New York Times in Europe have been wondering whether NATO is quietly melting under the warm summer smile of Moscow. At the same time communism has been attempting to leap-frog into the Near East and the Mediterranean basin; the Chinese are talking again about an invasion of Formosa; the German problem remains unsolved; and Mr. Truman, in an extraordinary speech, says the United States has lost "nearly every friend in the world."

Mr. Pearson therefore has thought it his duty to alert the Western peoples and to tell them candidly what they are up against.

They are up against a continuing heavy burden of taxation for defence but that probably is the least of their difficulties. The real problem of statecraft is to prevent the current frictions in the alliance from becoming serious quarrels, to restore the unity which prevailed before the Russian peace offensive began at the deceptive Summit of Geneva.

The next few months and years will show whether this can be done, or whether Mr. Khrushchev is right in believing that free men cannot stand together in defence of freedom and peace.

Mr. Pearson voices another warning and identifies another danger. The Russians, he thinks, may be sincerely afraid of Western aggression. He told Mr. Khrushchev over and over again that NATO had no purpose but defence. He told him also that the United States had no imperialist designs on any nation, or otherwise would have coerced Canada long ago. But the Russians were not convinced.

It is essential, Mr. Pearson says, to avoid giving the Russians some reason for fatal miscalculation, to make it clear to them that the West will fight for its own defence but for no other purpose. Hence, while building up its strength, the West should make no foolish gestures or reckless speeches.

In a special warning to the United States, Mr. Pearson says: "I hope, therefore, while standing steady against the new (Russian) policy of divide, weaken and destroy through blandishment, that the United States will avoid provocation and provocative statements like the plague."

If the free world will only listen to him, Mr. Pearson's adventure in the Kremlin may prove the most useful work that this great public servant has ever done.

For Victoria a Practical Program

MR. PERCY B. SCURRAH HAS announced the platform on which he stands for election to the mayor's chair. It is simple, straightforward and practical.

The experienced former alderman has avoided flamboyant promises and has declined any inclination to cloak his specific points in mystery. Mr. Scurrah has outlined projects which can be completed and has described them in terms every voter should understand. Nothing is contingent on confidential discussions with senior governments. There are no rabbits to be pulled out of the hat.

He wants off-street parking financed by returns from parking meters—a service for the motoring public which it is not getting now, though it is paying heavily.

He has taken a definite stand on the Point Ellice bridge, on the energetic prosecution of a lands sales campaign, on the enlargement of the Capital City grant, on improved garbage disposal arrangements, close coordination with the Town Planning Commission, repeal of the road and poll tax, development of Macdonald and Topaz parks for the free use of amateur athletics, improved relationships with outside municipalities, harmony within the City Hall and the development of the council as a policy-making body.

This is not a theatrical display aimed solely at attracting votes. It is a businessman's assessment of policies which should be pursued, conjoined with an experienced public servant's knowledge of how the projects can be done.

Mr. Scurrah tacitly invites the public to review what the present regime has not done, sets out particular work that can be accomplished and pledges a co-operative spirit in the affairs of this city and community to replace the destructive bickering and obstruction which have been too evident in recent civic affairs.

The candidate has offered the people a well-defined choice between what they have and what they could have. It rests with the voters to make the decision.

That None Should Die

TOMORROW CANADA AND THE United States will observe Safe Driving Day—a day on which its sponsors hope motorists will practice sufficient caution to avoid all highway accidents.

How drivers of this continent behave on the roads during a single day will probably have little effect on a year's statistics. One clear day in 365 will not be an influence of major proportions on the record of tragedy.

But it can be an event of great importance if the theme honored throughout the continent on that day becomes the cardinal principle of driving at all times.

The slogan of the campaign emphasizes that point. It is: "Make every day Safe-Driving Day."

Mr. Butskell Is Dead

WHEN BRITONS WENT TO vote in their last general election one opinion seemed to be widely shared. It was a general belief that little difference existed between the Conservative or Labor programs.

On financial policy the similarity was so marked that some English newspapers saw the Butler presentation merely as an extension of the design set by Labor's Hugh Gaitskell and called it Butskell.

Now, says the London Observer, Mr. Butskell is dead. The latest Butler budget—aimed at curbing domestic buying to stimulate exports—is seen as anything but a Labor budget. Laborites attack it as a straight Tory document, hitting the little man—particularly in such matters as housing—and favoring the wealthy.

The Labor Party is using the issue to weld together its fractured parts. It believes it has a definite rallying ground to replace the nebulous character of its recent appeal. And because Mr. Gaitskell has acquitted himself so well in his criticism of the budget he has gained headway in his march to party leadership as the successor of Mr. Attlee.

Labor, according to recent report, has found the Conservative Government acting in a way which challenges directly the Labor doctrines of fair shares all round and equality of sacrifice. In Mr. Gaitskell it apparently has recognized a competent champion.

The Butler budget, whatever it may do to re-establish a sound economy, has definitely served as a unifying force for the opposition. In doing so it has also shoved Mr. Aneurin Bevan's rebellion further into the background.

Chips

BY DAVID BROCK

THE other day somebody spoke (in public print, mind you) about "the donish waggeries of David Brock." Well, well, well. This probably fascinates and puzzles me a lot more than it fascinates and puzzles you. For all you know, I may actually be a don (which is a professor in England), and I may sometimes permit myself some waggish little pleasantry. But I know myself a lot better than that. According to my dictionary (which I must admit is compiled by dons), "donish" means "pedanticly stiff in manner. As the author of many a roaring song, I object to this pedantic stiff who is trying to label me as pedantically stiff. It is he who is the professional type, not I. Professors love trying to classify things and people. It is their whole job. Pasting on labels. Or pasting on libels.

YES, and the pedantic stiff who tried to classify me was so unwise as to claim that behind my donish waggery there lies indignation. I am an angry man whose spirit is sore and stinging (he says) from the ineptitudes and inanities of the world about me. Fancy that. And I never knew. By the way, ineptitude and inanity are two words I have never used in my life... there is nothing wrong with them, but they are a bit bookish... donish, you might say. And they have gone over so slightly off the boil, along with many another word.

This business about my being sore and stinging... well, all I can say is "Rats!" Great big double-ended rats. Large economy-size rats, with lanolin in them. It is true that I have known sorrow and pain and indignation... who hasn't? But I defy you to find them anywhere in my writings, either on this page or elsewhere. Several of my friends who knew me in my boisterous and naughty youth have complained that "Chips" is far too mellow and almost tolerant and forgiving and broadminded and other soft and soupy things. I think they are wrong. But this is the effect I have on them.

I HAVE always tried to display a good Pantagruelism, "which, as you know, is a certain jollity of mind pickled in the scorn of fortune." And which, as you know, is very different from a donish waggishness, and is also different from a sore and stinging spirit. When I say I have "tried," I don't mean it is any great effort, either. Far from it. What the pedantic stiff called the ineptitude and inanity of the world about me has never come as an shocking surprise to me, and this gives me a great advantage over the sore and the stung and the indignant. What else would you expect?

TO return to my alleged shock on finding the world so horrid. I should think that the sillier the world gets, the funnier it will be. And I'm really glad I'm here, and glad I'm allowed to laugh. If I often point out why a thing is funny, this naturally involves saying what's wrong with it. But that is hardly the same thing as uttering screams of pain and loud cries of "We wuz robbed!" Nor is it the same thing as disguising these screams and cries, either.

And here's another little matter. If I happen to be aware of a good deal of silliness, this surely makes the really good things seem all the better to me and all the more welcome. And the better the good things seem to me, the less likely I am to grumble, and to go round feeling sore and stinging. So I am doubly fond of the awful things of life... fond of them, and grateful to them.

FIRST, as mere entertainment... I wouldn't have missed them for anything. And second, to bring up the highlights of the good things, by contrast. I can't see anything very indignant and sore about this. Also, the indignant get terribly preachy. I don't.

Finally, let me say this: I long ago discovered that most of the human race is busy playing House... in various ways. Almost everything it does is a form of playing House... playing at being grown-ups. (This is my own discovery, so please don't pinch it.) Now this is very occasionally a nuisance. But mostly it is funny. It is terribly funny. Why should it make anyone sore and stinging?

As Our Readers See It

DR. THOMAS AGREES

Re your editorial of November 26 "What About Profits?": I would like to express my very great satisfaction with your comment and your stand against the proposal by the Chamber of Commerce to distribute the booklet "What About Profits?" in the high schools.

Your editorial is a splendid review of part of my argument before the school board. I would appreciate space to summarize one or two other points which I developed in addressing the school board.

I agreed with the C. of C. delegate that there should be education in Economics in the high schools. I informed him that there already is a prescribed course—Economics 92. If the content of that course is not satisfactory to the C. of C. the proper procedure is to make representations to the Department of Education—the authoritative and responsible body in our educational system. It is not the function of the C. of C. to write text-books and to have them put in the schools.

I did not make any claim to be non-partisan in my economic or political beliefs. But I did insist, and do insist, that my personal partisan beliefs along with those of the Chamber of Commerce, should not be advocated in the schools.

I appeared before the school board as a private citizen and educationist interested only in preserving the integrity of our public school system which I consider the basis of a democratic society. I was speaking only for myself—not for any organization. I trust you will give me such credit for integrity of purpose and objectivity of approach as your editorial writer would claim for himself.

Your writer comments that my protest should have little effect on the school board. Perhaps so. But now that "The Times" has taken up the issue and is "on my side of the fence" I have every confidence that the school board will make the wise decision.

EVENING OF THE SAINTS

I am sure that all responsible citizens will back up Chief Blackstock's demand for a ban on fireworks on All Hallows' Eve. We would go further and demand a ban on all public demonstration on that night.

Canadians seem to be completely ignorant of the meaning of "All Hallows' Eve." "Hallow" means "Holy." Blessed, and this is the evening of the Holy Saints. In more civilized countries it is celebrated by Midnight Mass and visits to the graves of the departed.

It is hard to understand how it ever came to be associated with unlicensed rowdiness and so-called fun as it is in this country.

Fireworks in the hands of children or any inexperienced persons are dangerous, as witness the number of mutilations. They should be entirely banned, or only used by reliable officials.

As for the contemptible practice of sending children out to demand food from strangers together with a threat of retaliation by mischief if it is not forthcoming, parents should realize that they are not only teaching their offspring to beg, but also teaching them how to blackmail.

Various letters from the sob-sister community insist that the little tots must have their fun. Was it the little tots' idea of fun to go and burn the beehives of a blind man and so deprive him of his livelihood?

POWS AND BUTTER

Another crippled ex-prisoner of war and I were discussing the good old days when nearly everyone was poor—and had all the butter they could eat.

We were surprised at the generosity of the government selling butter to the Germans at that price, when so many of the pensioners would love to have the chance to get some themselves.

However we are left with a thought that it will help the Germans to fatten up whilst they are devising new and more horrible concentration camps, so our children and grandchildren will be able to suffer as before.

We also think it is a fallacy to try to make friends with them via butter, when any one knows you get far more respect from them by knocking their heads together.

CAN. REG. No. 21837.

SCARCITY IN PLENTY

The Financial Post of Nov. 12 reports that "18 per cent of all Victoria residents are over the age of 65. In Oak Bay the figure is 17 per cent and in Saanich it is 14 per cent. There are 9,115 elderly people receiving some kind of social assistance in Victoria." While the help being given today is superior to past standards we also know that those who pass the rigid means tests enforced by the municipalities are living very close to the poverty line.

With all our productive pipelines filled to capacity with unsold goods does it make any sense to deprive the old folks of the necessities of life which would make their old age a time of comfort and security? We hawk our plenty around the world trying to sell it even at half price, while our own people spend their last years living on the cheapest foods which will keep body and soul together. Will a tender juicy beef steak be too rich for them?

The civilization which is producing our plenty was built by the older generation who are in need. They broke the stubborn prairie sod with oxen and horses. They built our railroads, working long hours for small pay. The women often raised their families under frontier conditions when splitting wood and packing water from a well was part of women's work.

Those who suggest that if it is physically possible to produce goods in this land of plenty it must be made financially possible to distribute that plenty to our own people are classed as madmen or worse. Those who laid the foundations of our present prosperity should want while food rots in storage is the way in which orthodox finance operates in the year 1955.

The Wishful Thinkers

BY JOSEPH AND STEWART ALSOP, From Washington

THERE is a real surge of hope that President Eisenhower may after all run again. It is obviously wishful. It does not appear to be based on any rational evidence. There is nothing to indicate that the President has so much as hinted at his intention to anyone in public life; and there are a good many positive reasons to think he has carefully avoided any discussion of the future except with members of his immediate family.

Nonetheless, this surge of hope that the President will run has now got to be taken very seriously, partly because it is so strong, and more particularly because it centers among the closest members of the President's official team and his closest friends outside the government.

Up to a fortnight ago, although the official line has always been that "we're going to finish the job," almost no one truly expected that he would do anything of the sort. But now the gloomy resignation of the first month after the President's heart attack has been replaced by a new outlook.

SANGUINE
The forecasts are always couched in some such language as "I really think he may run after all," or "I almost believe he'll do it in spite of the heart attack." But although tentative, the forecasts are sanguine.

Of course the men who make these forecasts desperately want to think what they now think. Yet these men are reasonably hard-headed. The change in their attitude has got to be attributed to some cause more solid than mass hypnosis. It has to be attributed, in fact, to the atmosphere these men find when they make their pilgrimages of business or friendship to the convalescent President's bedside or office.

They emphasize, naturally, the remarkable rapidity and speed of the President's recovery. They place great emphasis, too, on the way he has actively reached out for his responsibilities, refusing from the very start to accept his invalid diet of information that was originally prepared for him, and insisting instead on being given all the facts, pleasant and unpleasant, about any government problem up for discussion.

But above all these very high authorities always emphasize two other points of a more special character.
AFFECTED
First, the President has been deeply affected by the tremendous outpouring of affection and concern which his illness produced, not only in this country, but also throughout the world. In a rather macabre way, it has been like reading his own obituaries. The argument runs that he has found these semi-obituaries so extremely encouraging that he now thinks life more than ever worth living.

Second, the long, enforced inactivity of his convalescence is also said to have bored the President to tears. When a man is harassed and overdriven by the cares of a great office, retirement may seem most attractive to him. But if he is primarily a man of action, like Dwight D. Eisenhower, a long spell of vegetable, comatose dullness is likely to change his viewpoint. It can make him anxious only to get back to work as soon as possible and stay at work as long as possible.

Such are the arguments of the optimists who now believe the odds are better than even that the President will be a candidate to succeed himself.

The more sensible of these men close to the President have now abandoned the thoroughly silly idea that the Presidency can somehow be transformed into a part-time job. This kind of self-delusion, at any rate, is no longer being practised on a wide scale in high quarters.

PERSUADED
But most of the men who make these arguments will also admit, if pressed, that the President did not wish to run again even before he had his heart attack. He had been persuaded to do so, but against his personal preference and despite the strong contrary pleas of his wife and son.

Hence the arguments that he will now run amount to saying that a major heart attack, which had the somewhat unexpected effect of making the President want to continue in his man-killing job, although he did not want to do so when he had not had this physical warning.

Perhaps, therefore, a better clue to the President's future course lies in what he said, prior to the heart attack, to this year's annual White House party for the 22 Republican Congressmen and ex-Congressmen, headed by Gov. Christian Herter of Massachusetts, who signed the famous 1952 Congressional telegram asking Eisenhower to be a candidate.

In response to a toast to his 1956 candidacy, the President told the 22 that for health and other reasons he was strongly inclined to retire. He added that he could not tell what he would do in the end, but he was sure of two things: He knew quite well that there were certain Republicans whom he did not wish to succeed him; and if he decided to retire, he would work hard for the nomination of a man who would carry on where he left off, and he would then work even harder for this man's election.

Jamming the Air Waves

LONDON—This is certainly a strange commentary on the attitude between the nations on each side of the Iron Curtain...

Reyburn

Here you have a situation whereby we have just been visited in this country by some Russian battle-ships and their officers and men have been welcomed officially and unofficially and have gone sightseeing all over the place and been entertained by all and sundry... there is a Russian dance company currently playing in town and they have performed before the Queen at the Variety Command Show... Russia's crack soccer team—the Moscow Spartans—have been playing top teams here (their players spending nearly all their spare time in movie theatres seeing the type of film denied them in Russia).

Likewise, British naval, theatre and sports people are being welcomed and entertained in Russia.

With all this interchange of bonhomie one starts to get the feeling that everything's going along fine between this nation and Russia. Then all of a sudden a little thing brings you back to reality.

It happened in regard to a broadcast of the match between Moscow Spartans and Britain's Sunderland team. Russians at home wanted to hear a play-by-play description of this game by Russian broadcasters with the visiting team. The BBC was only too glad to make facilities available—but the British Foreign Office stepped in.

The Foreign Office controls the broadcasts by the BBC to Europe, which is natural enough. But the attitude of the Foreign Office toward this football broadcast to Russia was "All right, we'll allow this broadcast if you will agree to stop jamming what we send out to Russia."

At once the thing was taken from the level of ordinary human relations—the common people of each nation sharing the enjoyment of a football game—onto the level of power politics.

Presumably there is no reason why the Russians, if they want to, should not jam propaganda from this country beamed at their people in the Russian language. Any nation can hardly be expected to be keen on unfavorable matter coming in, whether it be in the form of books, pamphlets, films or broadcasts. During the war Britain jammed propaganda in English broadcast from Germany.

But the matter of whether or not Russians at home should hear their own commentators describing the doings of their crack football teams seems to be a different matter. It would appear to be outside major political issues and the Russians set Britain an example by regarding it as such. When the British Wolves recently played in Moscow, commentators from this country were freely allowed to broadcast shortwave back to Britain.

As the Daily Mirror said: "Why is the Foreign Office being so stupid? Why pick on a friendly international football game as an occasion for doing the Russians one in the eye?"

Dr. Alvarez is Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic and Emeritus Professor of Medicine Mayo Foundation.

I have been much impressed by the number of intelligent persons who keep telling me of their distress when, after an examination or an operation, they could not learn what was found or done. Perhaps they were told simply, "Take this medicine," or "We'll operate on you tomorrow," or "You have von Recklinghausen's disease, or neurocirculatory asthenia, or infectious mononucleosis, or disseminated lupus erythematosus." Naturally this sort of thing left them more frightened and worried and up in the air than they were before they went to the hospital.

Dr. Alvarez

So often we physicians hate to stop and spend time trying to give the patient some idea of what disseminated lupus erythematosus is. The other day I heard a brother physician trying to help such a patient by telling him that it was a collagen disease. You laymen can realize how greatly enlightened and satisfied and reassured the patient was!

My more enlightened medical brethren today are realizing that the man had a right to be told that he had a rare and poorly-understood disease that sometimes kills. That it tends at times to quiet down and then it may flare up badly. Fortunately, today, many of the patients are tide over their flare-ups with the help of cortisone.

I hope that gradually, with time, more of us physicians will outgrow the old idea that a doctor could and should disregard the desire of his patient to know what is going on. I hope that some day, after every abdominal operation, the surgeon will give the patient a report of what was found and done; also, a copy of the report of the pathologist, saying what he found on microscopic examination of the organ or bit of tissue removed. Why do I hope that this will be done? Because, in just the last two months I have seen a number of women who, a year or two ago, had some operation performed. In one case the husband is a prominent attorney, and yet he was unable to learn what was found, and what was done to his wife.

Why did I much want to know what was found, and why was the information so important to that woman's welfare? Because, if cancer was found, then almost certainly, the woman's symptoms today indicate a return of the disease. If no cancer was found, then I can give the woman and her husband some hope.

In one case there was a question if a tumor, found and partially removed, had originated in the ovary or the colon. If it came from the ovary then today there would be much more hope of stopping its growth with radiation and male hormone than if it came from the colon.

In another case, the woman had had a goiter removed, and later much radiation to her neck. She says her doctor refused to tell her anything. Now, when she comes with weird symptoms that suggest the presence of a scattered cancer, I so wish I could learn what type of tumor was removed from the neck. But I cannot find out. If the tumor was a certain type of cancer of the thyroid gland, the woman might now be helped by radio-active iodine.

Often, when an operation has to be performed on a patient of mine, I find it helpful to draw a little diagram or to reach back of my desk for a book on anatomy in which I can show the patient the part of his body that has become diseased. I can then give him some idea of how the defect is to be repaired.

In many a case I almost cure a patient simply by letting him see clearly what his problem is. Usually, when he is satisfied that his disease is never going to "turn into anything" or kill him, home he goes, happy and satisfied and reassured. One of the unhappy things we doctors often do is just to grunt when a patient asks, "Will this mangled hand of mine ever be of much use again?" or, "Will I be able to walk again, or will I ever be able to go back to my job?" Commonly, we doctors don't answer such questions because we are not sure what will happen. We hate to make a promise that may not be fulfilled, or we think that what we say may so discourage the patient that it will interfere with his recovery.

We physicians have always had the queer idea that when a woman's breast is removed we should not handicap her recovery by promptly answering the tremendous question that is in her eyes or on the tip of her tongue. We think it better to wait a week, or even to refuse ever to discuss the subject. Actually, through the years, a hundred women who had been through this ordeal have told me that it would have been so much kinder to have told them the truth as soon as they were out of the anesthetic. It was actually a relief to know the worst. As many a woman has said to me, "When my surgeon dodged my questions as to what had been found I was terribly cast down—feeling that the tumor must have been hopelessly malignant. Actually, later, I learned that it had a low grade of malignancy and had not involved the glands in my armpit. If the surgeon had only told me this as he made rounds the evening of my operation, I would have been so relieved and so happy."

Newspaper Stories Induce Hit-Run to Surrender

VANCOUVER (CP)—Daniel Jonassen, 30, was charged late Tuesday with failing to remain at the scene of an accident in which two pedestrians were injured, one critically.

Police said Jonassen, a West Vancouver bus driver, walked into city police headquarters Tuesday afternoon and admitted he was the motorist who had struck down the two Monday night.

A city-wide search by police found no trace of the motorist until Jonassen gave himself up. Most seriously injured was John Beaulieu of Maillardville, B.C., reported only in fair condition in hospital with head wounds. LAC Joseph Doucette, on leave from RCAF station at Penhold, Alta., was taken to hospital with leg injuries. Jonassen surrendered to po-

ON COURSE...ON STREAM

New Refining Process Gives Highest Octane Gasolines in CHEVRON History

"On Stream" this month at Stanovan Refinery is the first platinum catalytic reformer in Western Canada. As its name implies this new unit uses platinum as a catalyst to actually rearrange gasoline molecules and produce cleaner burning and more powerful fuels. In addition to this new refining process, Chevron gasolines have "Detergent-Action". They are the world's first and only fuels that clean carburetors to end the biggest single cause of engine stalling.

No effort has been spared to make Stanovan Refinery one of the finest on the continent. "The Platformer" is the latest addition of a $13,000,000 expansion program completed during the past year. It brings refining capacity to 18,000 barrels of crude oil per operating day.

This is but one phase of our planning. It anticipates that British Columbia will take its place as one of the great industrial areas of the world. Standard is ready always to serve every type of consumer in this province with fine petroleum products.

Father of Three Admits Guilt In 'Error Death'

SEATTLE (AP)—Renato Bellotti, 26, a truck driver about to go on trial for manslaughter for the mistake slaying of a Seattle policeman, has changed his plea from innocent to guilty.

Bellotti killed Patrolman James C. Brizendine, 32, with a blast from a shotgun last July in the mistaken belief Brizendine was a prowler who had been reported in the area.

Bellotti, the father of three children, "did not exercise the degree of caution which should have been used," a coroner's jury ruled.

Bellotti will be sentenced Dec. 9 by Superior Judge Lloyd Shorett.

CNR Not Losing Money Curtis Tells Kiwanis

Fails to Meet Interest Charges of Over 50 Millions; Outlines Expansion Plans

The impression that the Canadian National Railways, government owned, is losing millions of dollars yearly "is not the case," Austin Curtis, general agent of the CNR passenger department in Victoria told the Kiwanis Club here Tuesday.

"Since the CNR same" into operation in its present form on January 1, 1923, it has never failed to pay operating expenses," he said.

What it has failed to do, he went on, is to meet interest charges which have amounted over the years to over fifty millions of dollars.

The CNR is treated in every way as a private company, even to taxes. In 1933 the company paid $13,000,000 in taxes.

Mr. Curtis said "it is interesting to note that, with perhaps one exception, all of the recent railway building in Canada has been by the Canadian National, and further plans are under way or in the making for construction into the northland to tap our mineral rich territory."

He said the CNR's lines in the north were in the fortunate position of easy and economical branch development, and "among these are the line from Terrace, B.C., to Kitimat in connection with the tremendous Alcan operations and the line northerly to the Lynn Lake mining country (in Ontario)."

Costs of operation, said Mr. Curtis, are high. He quoted figures listing a $200,000 investment per annum per person in employment of railways, highest in the industrial list.

OTHER OPERATIONS

The CNR today, he said, operates in addition to a railway, three separate steamship services, "Canada's largest string of hotels," telegraphs, express, dockyards, car ferries, wharves, warehouses, stockyards, grain elevators, road transportation, and has an interest in one of Canada's major airlines.

The company has 115,000 employees, "the largest single employer of labor in Canada."

He continued: "We are the greatest single purchaser of materials in Canada with a stores inventory of 50,000 items worth $75,000,000."

Other points:
Handled in one year, 80,000,000 tons of freight; 24,000,000 express shipments; 14,000,000 telegrams and cables; a hotel guest list of 750,000 people; a revenue of $1,000 every minute throughout the year.

The Canadian government built the line from Halifax to Riviere du Loup in Quebec; it was opened in 1876. Three years later it was extended west to Levis, across the St. Lawrence River from Quebec City.

"It is an interesting sidelight on the thinking of that time that this line was built as far north from the United States border as possible for military and strategic reasons."

Next was the Grand Trunk—dealt with not from a time point of view but from East-West developments. It extended from Portland, Maine, through Montreal and Toronto to Chicago. Line history extends back to 1853. It was built mainly by British capital. This was the first international railway to operate as a unit on the continent, and is now part of the CNR, though it has retained its identity as the Atlantic and St. Lawrence, the name under which it was originally chartered.

The Canadian Northern had its start in 1895, a line from

Car Has More Lights Than Average Home

CLEVELAND, O. (UP)—The average 1955 automobile carries more light bulbs than the average home, according to a manufacturer that makes both types.

William H. Robinson, Jr. (of General Electric) said new cars average 22.8 light bulbs, while the typical American home has only 19 lamps for general lighting. New cars carried only 20 lamps two years ago.

Flood Control Brief Endorsed

DUNCAN—Westholme Ratepayers' Association has endorsed the river bank erosion and flood control brief submitted to Premier Bennett and the provincial cabinet by the B.C. Federation of Agriculture.

140 PROTEST WATER COSTS IN NANAIMO

NANAIMO (BUP) — At least 140 citizens are mad at the local water board. A petition filed by the hundred-odd consumers against a rate increase has been referred to Greater Nanaimo Water District by city council. Water rates in the city were increased last July.

Bonuses Set For Needy At Christmas

NANAIMO (CP)—City and province will combine again this year to make Christmas a merrier one for those receiving social assistance.

The department of health and welfare has advised the city council that the department has approved a supplementary allowance, or Christmas bonus, to persons in receipt of social assistance on the same basis as last year—$5 for each head of a family, $2 for each single person and $5 for each mother in receipt of mothers' allowance.

To this the city will add as in the past, $2.50 to each head of family and $1 to each single person.

Pender Votes Dec. 8 On Hospital Project

PENDER ISLAND (CP)—A plebiscite will be held Dec. 8 on Pender Island to determine whether islanders favor a new hospital at Ganges and borrowing the necessary funds to finance the project.

The group represents many residents hard hit by severe flood conditions Nov. 3 and 4, when the Chemainus river overflowed its banks as record rains were felt over most of Vancouver Island.

It has forwarded a resolution to the premier stressing the seriousness of the Westholme situation, and urging the appointment of a government department to be responsible for such matters.

Westholme also is seeking support of North Cowichan council for demands on the highways department and E & N Railway. The group asks that culverts on the Trans-Canada Highway and the railway be cleaned and enlarged to increase their capacity, and that log jams on the Chemainus river be removed immediately.

Trade Booms On New Ferry To Island

DUNCAN—Patronage on the Crofton-Vesuvius Bay ferry service, inaugurated Nov. 10, has exceeded expectations of the operators, Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce learned Monday night.

Supplies of sawdust fuel were sent from the Cowichan district to Salt Spring Island during the recent cold spell to avert a fuel shortage, and on one Saturday alone the ferry Geo. S. Pearson carried 43 cars and 105 passengers. It was decided at the meeting to ask the provincial government to erect directional signs at Crofton to indicate routes to Nanaimo, Chemainus, Duncan and Victoria.

ISLAND DIGEST

Victoria Daily Times WEDNESDAY, NOV. 30, 1955 9

Ferry Will Maintain Service Despite End of Present Charter

GANGES—Ferry service to Salt Spring Island from Swartz Bay and Crofton will continue even though the agreement covering the two operations ends Thursday.

"We will continue to give service until a decision is made by the highways minister," Gavin Mouat, of Gulf Islands Ferry Co. (1951) Ltd., operators of the two ferries, said today. "We have nothing in writing, but the governments expects us to carry on until other arrangements are made," he said.

It is believed Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi will make an announcement Thursday on the Salt Spring ferry situation. The government, in the past, has signified its intention to let the present charter expire, and call for tenders on a new agreement.

"I'm not alarmed about the situation," said Mr. Mouat, "but I'm disappointed that it is not settled."

The Swartz Bay-Fulford service given by the Cy Peck is subsidized by the government at the rate of $2,000 per month, and the subsidy rate on the Crofton-Vesuvius is $1,000 per month.

Mr. Mouat said he and other Salt Spring residents look forward to definite action on the proposal to establish a fast ferry service between the Saanich peninsula and the mainland. "A service like that would help all the Gulf Islands," he said.

Five Seek Seats At Lake Cowichan LAKE COWICHAN — Five candidates now seek election to two vacant seats on the village commission here. They are G. Woodward and Mrs. M. Child, retiring commissioners, who are standing for re-election; Adam Dickson, a former commissioner; G. Dillen and M. F. Wise.

Administrator Notes Surplus For Hospital

DUNCAN — King's Daughters' Hospital was able to show a $994 surplus for the first 10 months of 1955, administrator Ferguson Hoey reported to the board this week.

Operating revenue totalled $406,080 for the 10 months. Occupancy of the hospital is continuing high, as adult and child admissions for the 10 months totalled 3,423, about 6 per cent higher than the same period in 1954.

Patient days totalled 31,172 to Oct. 31, as compared with 30,593 for the same period last year.

AROUND AND ABOUT

With Jo Healy

While Cayuse a holiday is considered the best possible reason or even excuse to refrain from working, I am finding a visit to Alert Bay, on tiny Cormorant Island in turbulent Broughton Strait, a most frustrating—from a weekly columnist's viewpoint—experience.

For here is a daily columnist's dream. The thing is that this minute community that spreads itself along an approximate 2.5 miles of shoreline on an island roughly two miles wide by six long is simply chockablock full of color and contrast. There are too many good yards, the mind skips from one to the other, and in the end nothing gets written.

Alert Bay has an astonishing population of some 1,700 whites and natives. The Indians predominate by a considerable number, for this was originally and solely their island. I gradually sort out a good percentage of the faces that I meet and associate them with names, but the atmosphere is more elusive and somehow confusing. I can't absorb it all.

There is the waterfront, sliced by the government and commercial jetties and the airlines' wharf. The hustle and bustle is slowing down as the salmon fishing ends, but still the romance of those who "go down to the sea in ships" casts a spell as a tardy fleet sails in, the fishermen leaping with agile grace from boat to stern of the stately seiners. There are brave little gill-netters, while overhead aircraft soar and climb, glinting as purely in the sun as the gulls with whom they compete for airspace.

Winter grips the land as unprecedented November gales lash the sea. The temperature takes an untimely drop. There is a power failure, and electric pumps that draw the water into the vast reservoirs fail. This waterless, lightless condition continues spasmodically for days. Buildings that had been heated by electricity grow cold, and the demand for kerosene lamps and candles in the numerous stores exceeds the supply. We are warmed by oil but live by candlelight, and below us the big B.C. Packers' department store goes on without heat except for a brief hour or two respite in the long day. But the staff are uncomplaining, and shouts and laughter punctuate the thud of freight as a packer is unloaded at the company wharf. A mighty gust of wind shakes the building, and it trembles as a log, borne on the high tide, crashes against the piling. The great tanker, hove-to to replenish the town's oil supply, shifts her weight uneasily in the heavy swell that rolls across the bay.

Uptown in the shopping centre the clerks and customers look cold and bleak. The women seem to suffer the most and have a look of longing for the warmth of their homes. Here the greatest percentage of the married women have jobs as well as families. The town's pharmacist is a woman, who handles with dispatch her family of three scrawny boys and the responsible position of drug dispenser to the inhabitants of the town and the efficient 70-bed hospital that opens its doors to Alert Bay and the smaller fishing and logging communities near by.

The lone jewelry store, its glittering windows gay in contrast to the dingy storefronts, is operated by a smartly-dressed woman who invests the business with the glamor of a miniature Cartier's; the principal's wife conducts the home economics class in the modern school high on the hill and expertly raises her four children. In the office of the weekly newspaper, the wife works hard to help her editor-husband, while he assumes the role of reporter, photographer, type-setter and all the diverse processes of newspaper work.

A woman dispatcher sits in the warmth of a small office, directing the routes of the 10 taxis that are only a small part of the 68 motor vehicles that cause a steady traffic-stream on the scant two miles of road.

The clerks in stores, bank and post office are primarily women, a mingling of whites and natives. The Indians are jolly and stoic in the bitter cold; the white women laugh at their own bundle of sweaters, slacks, even gloves, and always ears snug under gay earmuffs.

We attend a holiday dance, and the handsome Legionnaire, who is also master of ceremonies, smoothly draws the crowd together. Couples with a sophisticated, cosmopolitan air mingle with the more garish, picturesque natives. A baritone with a British accent entertains us with his songs, and a small curly-headed Negro lad leaps on the platform and rings out a Calypso-like chant. Graceful women of Hawaiian descent sway in the arms of fishermen and loggers from other islands and business men who direct the commerce of this lively community.

I leave the island with regret at the end of the allotted fortnight. The big ship departs in the bleak early morning. I am a little afraid, not immediately of the crashing seas, but afraid of BEING afraid. But the wilder the waves, the deeper the sturdy steamer plunges in the watery chasms, the higher she raises her bow and shakes off the tons of shimmering foam, the more exhilarated I become.

Out of the conglomerate of impressions I glimpse and struggle to clarify in the past two weeks, one is gratifyingly obvious—I am a very good sailor.

Turk President Refuses to Let Premier Quit

ANKARA, Turkey (AP)—Premier Adnan Menderes submitted his resignation today, but President Celal Bayar rejected it and directed him to find a new cabinet.

All 16 cabinet members quit the Turkish government Tuesday night in a noisy Democratic party caucus during which one party member was punched in the nose.

The cabinet resignations resulted from Turkey's deteriorating economic situation. Prices have risen steadily, supplies of many essential commodities are short and the supply of foreign exchange is low. Menderes' Democratic party dominates parliament completely, holding 504 of the 541 seats.

U.S. COLLEGE PROVES INSTALMENT PLAN WORKS

ERIE, Pa. (UP)—Americans, accustomed to buying anything from engagement rings to the family car on credit, can get a college education on the instalment plan now too.

Gannon College here reports that its "no-down-payment, pay-as-you-go" plan of financing a college education has met with considerable success.

Since the program was put into effect four years ago, more than 600 young men have gone through Gannon by borrowing their tuition through an arrangement with the Bank of Erie at an interest rate of $1.33 per $100 for a four-month period.

PM Aid Asked to Stop Egypt-Israel Strife

OTTAWA (BUP)—On the eve of Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett's visit to Ottawa, Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent has received an open letter urging him to help stop the "armament race between Egypt and Israel."

The Canadian Congress of Labor and the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada combined to send the letter to Mr. St. Laurent who will meet Sharett here tomorrow. The Israeli premier also will confer with External Affairs Minister Lester Pearson.

Sharett, who scheduled a day's visit to Montreal before coming here, is expected to request arms aid for his country.

President Claude Jodoin of the TLC and CCL secretary-treasurer Donald Macdonald signed the letter from the two labor organizations which represent more than 1,000,000 Canadian workers.

"The trade union movement of Canada is unalterably opposed to any aggravation of existing international tensions. A conflict in one part of the world can easily turn into another world holocaust."

Children Get Ulcers Says Pediatrician

BISMARCK, N.D. (UP)—A Bismarck pediatrician says that many children, like their worried elders, suffer from stomach ulcers.

Dr. Robert B. Tudor said "one reason doctors have been slow in realizing that children have ulcers is that children's symptoms are very much different from adult symptoms."

"Because their symptoms differ from adults," he added, "their ulcers go unrecognized and they are dismissed as neurotic, finicky, or feeding problems."

Tudor estimated that one to five per cent of all children have ulcers in some form, compared to 10 per cent of all adults. But he said he is convinced that the incidence is higher because of failure to recognize the symptoms in children until recently.

EASILY TESTED
"The classic symptom for adult is a stomach pain," he said, "they drink some milk and find temporary relief—then the pain recurs."

He said the symptoms vary with the age of children, and that they are especially hard to diagnose in newly born babies.

HALF A PRIZE BETTER THAN...

MILWAUKEE (UP)—Mrs. Lorraine Williams, who sells popcorn to a suburban theatre, was closing the refreshments stand recently when she noticed she was missing one earring. She had just stopped looking for it when a young man walked up to the stand with an earring on his finger. "This theatre sure puts swell prizes in the popcorn," he told her, "but I can't seem to find the other one."

19-POUND PUFFBALL

Puffball to beat all puffballs is this giant being displayed by Dave Hall in Three Rivers, Mich. The 19-pound fungus, said to be edible, measures 60 inches in diameter, a far cry from the ordinary giant puffball which measures from four to 12 inches around. This one was found by a hunter.

HOME GARDEN

By HILDA BEASTALL

Perennials Survived Early Frost Best

The largest group of plants apparently unharmed by the prolonged frost earlier in the month is the perennial group.

Hilda

This includes all the herbaceous favorites which die down each fall, and send up new growth from the roots each spring.

These herbaceous perennials are perfectly winter hardy, since the roots are covered with soil and the tops die down anyway.

As the soil becomes colder, active growth decreases and if the soil freezes, little harm is done to the plant's constitution.

Since the publication of the advice to gardeners by the local association of nurserymen on not pruning or cutting back shrubs damaged by the frost, we have had several phone calls about what to do with chrysanthemums, golden rod and such material.

All these are in the herbaceous class, and should be cut back to about five inches from soil level.

Some perennials usually go through the winter here with green foliage, but this year I notice a number are quite blackened. One such is the summer flowering penstemon.

Not being sure whether there may be a revival from the roots, I am cutting them down to soil level.

With the current mild spell, it will be well to proceed with

Girls Who Killed Home Matron Face Charge of Murder

AKRON, O. (UP)—Authorities said they would file first degree murder charges today against five remorseful teen-age girls accused of killing a detention home matron during an escape.

The last of the girls, Mrs. Zella DeCost, 16, of Tunnelton, W.Va., was recaptured Monday night less than a half block from the Summit county detention home from which the girls escaped Sunday night.

Mrs. DeCost was costless and shivering in her short-sleeved dress.

The girls were accused of overpowering Mrs. Eula Bonham, 59, when she entered their dormitory for a routine inspection.

Police said they tied her with belts from their dresses and stuffed ammonia-soaked rags into her mouth.

TEETH GOOD, NO ARTHRITIS

Exotic Delicacies Keep Eskimos Healthy

WINNIPEG (CP)—The coastal Eskimo is somewhat of a connoisseur of food in the far North. His diet, strange to the white man, ranges far beyond the commonly-accepted raw meat and whale blubber.

Dr. William J. Wood, chief medical officer and regional superintendent of Indian health services, says some of the typical Eskimo dishes include an Arctic salad of partly digested shell fish in the stomach of a walrus, a main course of walrus blubber, or a side dish of fermented ptarmigan, the Baffinland equivalent of roquefort cheese.

After that, Dr. Wood says, the Eskimo is liable to wash it all down with fermented seal oil, a more digestible and palatable drink than fresh seal oil.

Dr. Wood has served since 1947 with the Indian health service, which operates five hospitals, three sanatoria and 13 nursing stations serving 30,000 Indians and 2,000 Eskimos in the North. He says the Eskimo has exploded some fallacies of the white man's concepts of diet and health.

There is no salt in the Eskimo diet, for instance, yet they have suffered no ill-effects.

Another point of interest to the white man is that the Eskimo never uses a tooth-brush. Yet dental decay is practically nonexistent. The only tooth trouble occurs with Eskimo women who wear their teeth down by chewing hides to soften them.

Amalgamation—Big Question

The Times election forum reaches new heights of interest today with 13 out of 14 candidates for mayor or council of Victoria giving replies to a reader's question.

Readers are asked to send in questions. Times reporters will interview as many of the candidates as can be contacted for their opinion. Questions should be brief and limited to one to a letter.

Here's today's question: "The provincial government has indicated it intends to draft legislation under which adjacent municipalities could form metropolitan areas."

"Would the candidates give their view on setting up a metropolitan area for Victoria, as against the idea of complete amalgamation of the city and three surrounding municipalities?"—Sandy M.

Mayorality candidate Mayor Claude Harrison: (The mayor stated that he will not answer further forum questions.)

Mayorality candidate Percy B. Scurrah: "Until the results of the Chamber of Commerce survey of municipalities which starts Dec. 5 is concluded, it is impossible to draw a conclusion. The facts to be brought out will put Victorians in a position to say whether a metropolitan area or total amalgamation would be best suited to the needs of the district."

Mayorality candidate W. A. Scott: "Unity is strength—unity of government brains welded to those of the working people is the greatest of all. It matters not whether it is called a metropolitan area or amalgamation, so long as the government and people are united for common interests, whether municipally, provincially or federally."

Aldermanic candidate W. F. Pinfold: "If the provincial government intends to draft such legislation, then it must be prepared to investigate the possibility of the system, if requested to by any interested municipality without committing the municipality to any action."

Aldermanic candidate Geoffrey I. Edgelow: "Amalgamated services would be very sound business for all taxpayers... but as the municipal government is the closest government to the people, it would still be gratifying to keep local elected bodies in operation. Hence I would favor a metropolitan scheme."

Aldermanic candidate M. H. Mooney: "I am not in favor of complete amalgamation but would favor a metropolitan arrangement where health, fire, police, library and water departments were under one council. It must be remembered that Victoria has more to offer than any of the other municipalities if such a scheme were developed."

Aldermanic candidate Hugh Ramsay: "It would seem that a metropolitan area would offer a compromise to certain items which are found objectionable by many people. It covers the main needs that amalgamation would provide but still allows each municipality to retain its own identity."

"One of the chief benefits of a metropolitan area would be the fact that it would be more generally agreed to. I think, by ratepayers of Greater Victoria."

Aldermanic candidate Miss Jane Hall: "It is quite impossible to answer the question intelligently unless full details of the suggestion are outlined and expressed in actual terms of a draft agreement. The conditions of the agreement could obviously change the whole approach to the problem and it is not possible to give the answer in advance without the facts upon which to base a decision."

Aldermanic candidate Capt. D. J. Proudfoot:

"I'd have to give this very careful study. In London and New York there is metropolitan form of civic government... I don't think we are yet big enough to justify the expense. By what I hear Victoria is not very keen on amalgamation, however."

Aldermanic candidate Elmer D. McEwen:

"We are in a favored position for co-ordination of services for metropolitan organization. The sewer situation in Saanich will break that municipality if there isn't help forthcoming from other centres. We can't do anything in Victoria which won't help the other municipalities as well as ourselves. We are all one big family."

Aldermanic candidate Arthur K. Kingsley:

"I believe a question of that nature requires a great deal of study and investigation before arriving at any conclusion."

Aldermanic candidate Charles W. Hunt:

"It would take years for the city and municipalities to accept complete amalgamation at one step. I believe our first problem would be to gradually merge police and fire departments without detriment to any chiefs, officers or men. This eventually would decrease everyone's cost of operation and increase protection and security."

Aldermanic candidate Mrs. Lily Wilson:

"The creation of a metropolitan area for Victoria and the three surrounding municipalities is a sensible approach to the question of amalgamation. In negotiations with other governments the four areas joined together would carry more weight than they would carry separately."

Aldermanic candidate Joe North:

"A metropolitan area would be a good thing for everybody in this district—we are one city geographically and our affairs would prosper if we were one civic family as well."

Boucher Can See Daylight Ahead

By BILL RAYNER
To most hockey fans, Frank Boucher's position with the Regina Regals may be somewhat akin to jumping from the frying pan into the fire. Boucher is coach of the Regals, doormats at the moment of the prairie division of the Western Hockey League, and his job in Regina is to lure sports fans away from football back to pro hockey. The Regals aren't drawing too well at the moment, but Frank is optimistic. He saw the same poor attendance in New York the past five years or so when, as general manager, he attempted to build the Rangers into an NHL contender.

"Now look at the Rangers," he said in his hotel room Tuesday night. "They've got a winning hockey team and they're starting to fill Madison Square Garden." Boucher was in town for Tuesday night's contest with the Victoria Cougars at Memorial Arena, and although the long road trip was taking its toll in losses for the Regals, he liked his job with Regina. After beating the Cougars, 4-1, he liked it better. "I like it there," he said. "It's a good sports town, and I think we can start filling the arena, now that the football season is gone. Regina is the greatest football town of its size in Canada, and I think we can make it that way in professional hockey, too."

Boucher liked his hockey team, too. His squad is in last place, true, but as soon as ailing, slumped-down goaltender Luce Dechene is whole again, he feels that Regina will be up with the leaders. "The league is pretty well balanced, too," he said, "and it's playing real good hockey. About the best in the league should be Calgary and Winnipeg. They've got good power." Boucher knows a little something about hockey and hockey players. Now 54 years old, he played a bit of hockey himself, 533 games in 13 seasons for the Rangers. Just about enough to love the game. That's why, after the years of effort in New York were beginning to pay off in victories and sellout crowds, he left to take over the thankless job of selling pro hockey in Regina. And he is anxious to get the current road trip over and get back to Regina. "We had our biggest crowd just before we left," he beamed. "I think we'll get Regina interested in hockey pretty soon." Chances are he's right.

... BUT NOT FOR LONG
This was Regina's Frank Boucher after Tuesday night's WHL game against Cougars, the 4-1 victory being a relief to his jangled nerves.

APPREHENSIVE...
This was Regina's Frank Boucher before Tuesday night's WHL game at Memorial Arena, the worries of a losing club resting heavily on his mind.

IT'S MY VIEW

By BILL WALKER, Sports Editor

Picking up the pieces, and it appears the Cougars will have a few scraps to pick up next week when they make their first junket to the prairies.

Coach Eddie Olson is looking for no better than an even break, 'cause that's all any team can really hope for in a schedule that sees a club play five games in six nights with travel no picnic between contests.

It's still "mistakes" that's "beating us," says Olson, of the recent lack of success by the club, especially last night's game, when he said: "There is nothing to say after that... that, and the fact that only one forward line is doing the heavy work in the production department... incidentally on hockey is the data that Sid Finney and Steve Witluk of Calgary recently joined the 100-goal club. Eddie Dorohoy has become the second player in league history to accumulate 300 assists (Bobby Love with 334 is the other), the Cougars are the most penalized club in the league, also top the circuit in majors with 13, and share the lead with Saskatoon in misconduct penalties, each with five....

WALKER

And if you still like football, even after the par excellence that was served up at Vancouver, Saturday, drop in and see the Little Soccer League players at Windsor Park Saturday morning.... The moppets will give you plenty of thrills and probably surprise you with their ability....

... Even Joe Was Crying

Frank Leahy, former Notre Dame coach, is of the firm opinion that if you think about a thing hard enough, you will begin to believe it, even though you yourself know it isn't true....

He illustrated the point at the Grey Cup dinner when he told a story on Knute Rockne, dean of all coaches at that fabled football institution....

It was in the 1929 season and Notre Dame was scheduled to play Army in a crucial game.... Rockne knew a victory would mean a national championship for his team, and he also knew that he used up most of his oratorical genius beforehand in extolling the team to an unbeaten season until that time.

He was explaining his problem to an old friend, Joe Burns prior to the Army game, and Burns suggested:

"Why not tell 'em, Rock, that this is your last game, the doctor has ordered you to quit, and you've been getting nasty letters from an eastern alumni group...."

Came the day of the game and Rockne addressed his players in the dressing room.... "You got to win, this is my last game, the doctor says I'm dying.... etc., etc."

Soon he had every player in the place with tears in his eyes; two Irish policemen standing at the doorways were also crying; so were the trainers, and so was a stranger in the dressing room—he was crying harder than anyone.

That stranger was Joe Burns, the fellow who had given Rockne the advice.

"We won the game," Leahy recalled, "and when Burns met Rockne afterwards he asked him what he was going to do now that he had told his players that was his last game as coach."

Rockne thought for a moment, then replied:

"If I get a letter of apology from that Eastern alumni group, I will reconsider."

Harry McBrien is the secretary of the Canadian Rugby Union, and undoubtedly the busiest man in Vancouver last week, with the possible exception of Bill Clancey, the front man for Vancouver's entertainment program.... But did Harry ever lose his aplomb; not that we noticed. And it was with distinct courtesy that he bid us welcome, helped to make our stay more pleasant and graciously answered the queries put forth....

Clancey at one time was resplendent in morning coat, striped trousers, bow tie, top hat, and with B.C. Lions' colors (orange and black) fluttering from his button hole.... and never did he deter from his objective in making all visitors welcome....

And now, what we hear is that Harry Wipper is looking for a job in the city.... Harry Wipper, the lacrosse player, that is....

DRUG CHARGE PROBE

Did Coley Get A 'Slow Pill'?

PHILADELPHIA (BUP)—The Pennsylvania Athletic Commission will hold a closed, "investigative hearing" Thursday into reports heavyweight Coley Wallace was "drugged" before his losing bout with Bob Baker at Cleveland in October, 1954.

Alfred M. Klein, a member of the three-man commission, said the hearing was requested by Morton Witkin, attorney for Frank (Blinky) Palermo, Wallace's manager and also pilot of former welterweight champion Johnny Saxton.

Witkin said in a letter to volved any action detrimental Klein last week he learned of reports that Wallace had been duty of the commission to make a "slow pill" and wanted an inquiry into it, Klein said. Palermo's name "cleared."

Wallace, who portrayed Joe Louis in the movies; Palermo and Jimmy Wilson, who was in Wallace's corner in the Cleveland bout, are among witnesses.

Flyers Whip Americans

Edmonton 3, Seattle 2

EDMONTON (CP)—Edmonton Flyers moved into a second-place tie in the Prairie division of the Western Hockey League with the idle Winnipeg Warriors Tuesday night with a 9-2 win over Seattle Americans.

Flyers scored three goals in each period for the balanced win before 2,300 fans. Both Seattle goals came late in the third period, to spoil a potential shutout for Gilles Boisvert in the Edmonton nets.

It was an important win for the Flyers, who had only a tie to show for their last five games.

The Edmonton club was paced by the two-goal efforts of Gerry Melnyk and Ed Stankiewicz, and single markers by Norm Corcoran, Bill McNeill, Bill Dea, Chuck Holmes and Ray Kinasevich.

Seattle marksmen were Rudy Filion and defenceman Jack Bowness.

Seattle coach Billy Ray was missing from the players' box, suffering from an attack of 'flu.

Fists flew at the 17:42 mark of the third period following a penalty to Flyer captain Steve Hymanak. Seattle forward Eddie Dorohoy tangled with Flyer Pete Wright, and both sat out two-minute penalties for roughing.

Tonight Seattle meets the Quakers at Saskatoon, while Flyers are idle.

But Olson Just Says 'Nothing'

REGINA 4, VICTORIA 1

By BILL WALKER

There was a time, a while ago, forsooth, when coach Eddie Olson of the Victoria Cougars could point his finger and say:

That particular play was our downfall; or that particular player was mainly instrumental in our victory.

But that was a while ago; certainly not Tuesday night at Memorial Arena.

For last night, Olson said simply that he had nothing to say and this is how he said it: "There is nothing to say."

Frankly, and with no attempt at hedging, Olson admitted that the Cougars didn't belong with Regina Regals.

The Regals proved it, if further proof was necessary to those who saw it, with a 4-1 victory.

It was the first meeting between the clubs this year. And the Regals, although they are tail-end Charlies on the prairie totem pole of the Western Hockey League, didn't have too much to do to outlive that position.

It wasn't too bad in the first period, give the Cougars that much credit. They were all even in a scoreless, but dull duel and might even have had a goal early from Doug Macauley.

But the decay set in soon afterwards.

Norman Johnson got another tally half-way through the third period.

Fighting desperately, but with little cohesion, strangely unfamiliar with each other, and only to avoid a shutout, the Cougars did succeed in that.

Colin Kilburn scored the lone goal at 17:54 of the final period by slapping the puck off Jim Hay's stick between goalie Lucien Dechene's legs.

Dechene played his part in the Regal victory well. Not as portly as he once was, he didn't really need to be in this one. Opportunities, like those fashioned by the Regals, were a rarity to the Cougars for the most part, and practically nonexistent for long periods of time.

The Cougar fate was sealed for good then and there. But to make it more certain rookie seven times, dropped out of the western division lead, and now trail Vancouver by seven points.

Little wonder is it that Olson said:

"There is nothing to say."

Because really there wasn't the club now being below .500 for the first time.

TAMPA, Fla.—Willie Per, 127, Hartford, Conn., outpointed Paddy Gault, 124, Spartanburg, S.C. (10).

The One Save That Mattered Most

If there could be called a key save that Dechene had to make, he made it. That came in the second period with the score 1-0 for the visitors, and off a hard shot by Doug Anderson to the corner which Dechene barely tucked with his hand to send the puck skidding by the post.

With Paul Strasser sidelined with an injured shoulder, the Cougars dressed Reg Beliveau once more. But he was used only sparingly, a word which also describes the manner in which most Cougar effort was given.

Several fans missed it, as they had left early, but the one real bit of fight the Cougars did show came after the final whistle. Kilburn and Gordon Wilkie of the Regals matched tempers and received major penalties. Kilburn did not get the best of this argument either.

But Kilburn shouldn't feel too badly because that's been the pattern since Nov. 11, a losing pattern set by the club.

During that time the Cougars have won only one decision, picked up a draw Saturday in Westminster, taken the count

Canucks Edge Royals

Vancouver 7, Westminster 5

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver Canucks, coming from behind in the last period, skated to a thrilling 7-5 victory over New Westminster Royals here Tuesday night to extend their lead in the Western Hockey League Coast Division to seven points.

Playing before a crowd of 3,000, Canucks tied it up late in the third period and banged in the winning goal with less than three minutes remaining. They added the insurance marker in the dying seconds while the New Westminster net was empty.

Pacing Vancouver to its fourth straight win were Ray Cyr, and Phil Maloney with two goals apiece, and Les Lilley, Bob Kabel and Freddie Brown.

Big guns in the Royal's attack were Doug Adam and Gordie Fashowsky, with a pair of goals each, and Blinky Boyce.

New Westminster jumped into a 1-0 lead in the first period, finished the second trailing 3-4, and held a 5-4 margin until the last four minutes of the final.

Cyr deadlocked the count 5-5 at 16:07 of the third, sliding in and going on one knee to deflect Brown's pass into the net.

At the 17:15 mark, Cyr took Bernie Grebinksi's pass and relayed the puck to Brown, who found the short corner with a 20-foot, screened shot from about 20 feet out.

New Westminster pulled goalie Bev Bentley from the net with two minutes left in an attempt to close the gap.

Canuck goalie Ray Mikulan came up with three nice saves and then Maloney took Grebinksi's pass at centre, skated in on Bob Bergeron and lifted the puck over the New Westminster defenceman's head and into the empty net at 19:31.

'Hopalong' May Use Canada as Lion Bait

CHICAGO (AP)—Howard Hopalong Cassidy, Ohio State's brilliant halfback, will wait until spring to decide whether to join Detroit Lions, who drafted him Monday.

Cassidy, attending a 4-H club ceremony, implied the Lions may have to bid against "some pretty fabulous offers from Canada."

He said his decision on pro football will be made after he finished baseball competition at Ohio State.

Cassidy, a centrefielder, batted .327 last spring.

Cassidy, who has been called by his coach "the greatest player of this century," Tuesday was selected as 1955 winner of the Heisman Memorial trophy.

The Heisman trophy is awarded annually by the Downtown Athletic Club of New York to the "outstanding college football player in the United States."

The trophy is named in honor of John W. Heisman, one of football's great coaches, who

BASILIO MEETS DE MARCO

Title Bout Even Money

By JACK CUDDY
United Press Sports Writer

BOSTON (UP)—Handlers of welterweight champion Carmen Basilio were suspicious of a betting coup today as "even money" was surprisingly quoted for his first title defence against ex-champ Tony De Marco in their return bout tonight at Boston Garden.

Strangely heavy backing for young De Marco of Boston suddenly hammered the 8-5 odds favoring Basilio down to the even-money price, and bookmakers were confident the challenger would be favored before ring time.

Co-managers Johnny de John and Joe Netro were alarmed as the wagering swung away from their champion. They asked the Massachusetts Boxing Commission for reassurance of a quare deal for 28-year-old Carmen tonight.

"I simply can't understand it," said De John. "Last June, Carmen was favored at 9-5 for their first fight at Syracuse (N.Y.), and he took the title from De Marco on a technical knockout in the 12th round. Yesterday morning he was favored at 8-5. Now it's even money. What gives?"

Commissioner Henry Lamar told De John, "No news about the referee or judges could have leaked out of the commission because we haven't yet made up our minds about who will officiate tonight."

Bookies said the swing to the 147-pound limit. Also because stock young Tony should be in much better condition than for their first fight on June 10.

Meanwhile co-promoter Sam Silverman hoped for a sellout of 13,900 fans and a record indoor Boston gate of $190,000. The scheduled 15-round bout also was assured a $50,000 fee for national television and radio over ABC networks at 7 p.m. (PST).

Grey Cup To Host 75,000?

TORONTO (CP)—Promoters of a proposed automobile race track to be built near Toronto said Tuesday the site could be turned into a 75,000-seat football stadium in time for the 1956 Grey Cup game.

Hugh Green, an official of the newly-formed Maple Leaf Auto Racing Club, said in an interview it is hoped work on the $3,500,000 scheme will start this winter. The plan, if approved by the Ontario highways department, would involve construction of one and two-mile tracks on a 750-acre site near Kettleby, 28 miles north of Toronto.

Green said the initial plan calls for a permanent covered stand to seat 25,000. Two sets of steel-constructed bleachers would provide another 50,000 seats. This would be three times the accommodation afforded at Toronto's Varsity Stadium, regular site in recent years of the Grey Cup game, and twice the seating space of Vancouver's Empire Stadium, where this year's football classic was played.

Green said the track would provide facilities for Olympic Games, military, tattoos, mass religious gatherings and other events.

Gump, Jacques In Race

NEW YORK (CP)—Lorne Worsley of New York Rangers has completed a red-hot week of puck-stopping to give Montreal's Jacques Plante a spirited challenge for his position as the National Hockey League's most efficient goaltender.

Plante, who has topped his rivals ever since he stopped all but two of the first 80 shots fired at him as the season opened, still leads the pack with a .937 record on 474 saves out of 504 chances, a three-point drop from last week's figure.

But Worsley blocked 94 of 97 shots in his three appearances of the week for a .969 percentage that carried his overall record up five points to .936, just one point behind Plante. He has stopped 623 or 669 for the season.

Terry Sawchuk of Boston, last week's runner-up, had a disastrous .851 for the week, blocking 103 of 121 shots. His season's mark fell 15 points to .917, dropping him to fourth place behind Chicago's Al Polonsky, who lost two points at .923.

Detroit's Glen Hall is fifth at .916, unchanged, and Toronto's Harry Lumley dropped one point to .907.

Plante remains far ahead in the Vezina Trophy competition, based on the lowest total of goals allowed, with an average of 1.61 a game to 2.04 for Hall and 2.33 for Worsley.

Shawnigan Won It, And Handily!

The Shawnigan Lake Boys' School rugby team must wonder what it has to do to get a victory recognized in Victoria.

On Monday, Nov. 21, Shawnigan Lake defeated Victoria High School, 15-3, in an exhibition rugby match. That game score was reported.

Later the same week the score got reversed and Vic High was given credit for a 15-3 victory. The truth is that Shawnigan won the game, 15-3, and might have enjoyed an even wider margin as the game was called 20 minutes early.

The Times apologizes for this slight on Shawnigan's ability.

Little League Founder Planning Rival Group

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (UP)—Little League Baseball, Inc., has taken legal action in an effort to bar its disgruntled founder from forming a rival organization for boys.

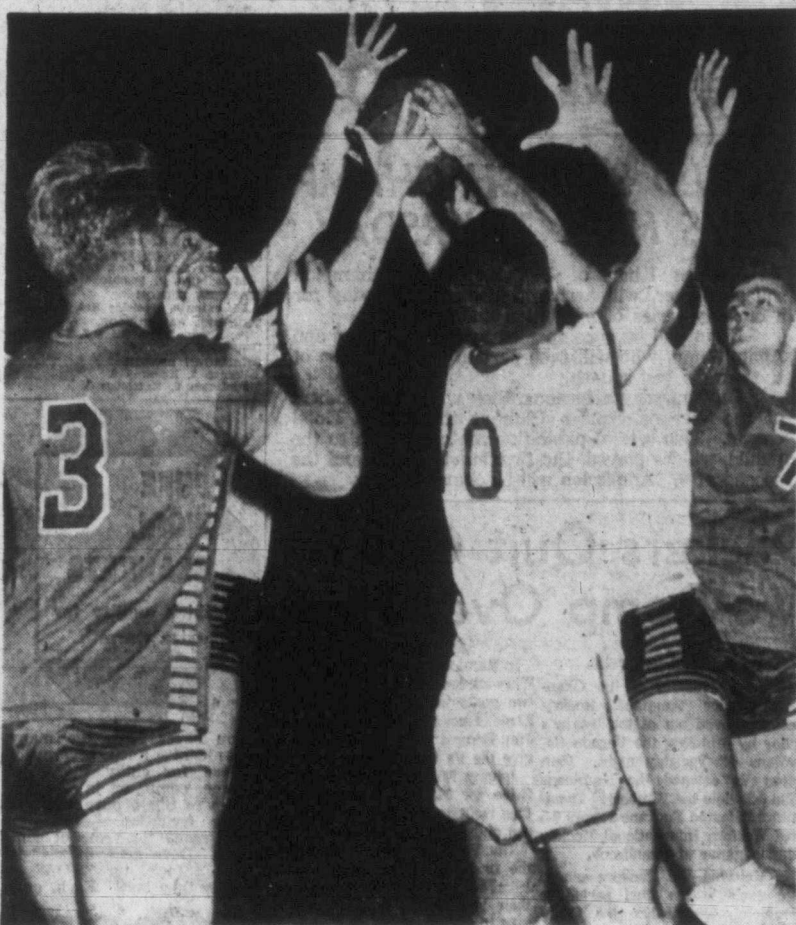

Robert Stotz, league public relations director, said the corporation petitioned the U.S. district court at Lewisburg for an injunction against Carl E. Stotz, who founded the league in 1939.

Stotz announced he would try to organize boys' baseball clubs into a new group called "The Original Little League" after filing a $300,000 breach of contract suit against the corporation and resigning as league commissioner.

Invitation Withdrawn
SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—The Australian Athletic Union has withdrawn its invitation to Laszlo Tabari and Sandor Haros, Hungarian track stars. They had been asked to run in a series of meets here next month.

The union said it had cancelled the bids because the Hungarians failed to answer letters and telegrams.

Stotz said a hearing on the injunction petition will take place next Monday, Dec. 5. The legal action was initiated on the grounds Stotz' plan would "cripple little league baseball by setting up a rival organization in violation of his contract with Little League Baseball, Inc."

Stotz added.

Stotz announced he would try to organize boys' baseball clubs into a new group called "The Original Little League" after filing a $300,000 breach of contract suit against the corporation and resigning as league commissioner.

'Glass Jaw' Russians Building Up Resistance

By ROBERT RICE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Russia's "glass jaw" in hockey—a tendency to crack under beefy Canadian body-checking—isn't so glassy any more.

The Soviet skaters, comparative newcomers to international hockey, are gradually building up resistance to the hard-hitting style of play that unnerved them in the world championships last February. Canada's 5-0 victory then was partly credited to robust body slamming.

"They're gradually catching on," says hockey-wise Richard (Red) Stapleford of Stratford, Ont., an Ontario government official in London who has scouts keeping tab on the Russians.

The Russians are here on a three-game exhibition tour against teams—predominantly Canadian—of the English National League. They laced Harringay 11-1 last Saturday and just scraped out a 5-4 triumph over the same team Monday night. They meet Wembley Lions Thursday and then leave for Stockholm on another stage of their preparation for the next world championships, scheduled for Cortina d'Ampezzo, Italy, Jan. 26-Feb. 5 next year.

PLAY FOR KEEPS

The second game against Harringay showed that the Russians, supremely fit thanks to frequent weight-lifting sessions, are getting used to playing for keeps. British crowds, brought up on a blend of Canadian toughness and continental agility, were surprised to see the odd Harringay player spilled in a collision with a Russian.

The Iron Curtain invaders also seemed to discipline themselves against too drastic retaliatory checks. It looked as though they wanted to learn the rugged style—but also how to extricate themselves when necessary.

Canada's free-wheeling hockey has sometimes jarred the Europeans. The teams will all be playing European style at the 1956 championships but the Russians apparently want experience in North American techniques. They also study movies of the Stanley Cup playoffs, and take full-length films of their own games for dressing-room drill.

Thirteen of the 17 players with this year's Russian team played for the club which bowed to Pen-ticton (B.C.) Vs last February.

COUGAR PROTEST DENIED

SEATTLE (CP)—The Western Hockey League has disallowed a protest by Victoria Cougars following a game, they lost 2-3 in overtime to Seattle Americans here Nov. 19.

Victoria said referee Blair Peters erred in assessing misconduct penalties against the Cougars in the final minutes of the third period and for not assessing Seattle players for misconducts at the same time. The Cougars also said additional penalties should have been assessed against coach Billy Reay of Seattle.

WHL president G. A. Leader said in a statement Monday the penalties in no way affected the game's outcome.

BLAKE'S POCKET-FUL OF DREAMS

The chores of freshman Montreal Canadiens coach Hector "Toe" Blake, former Hab star, have been made considerably easier this year by the superb play of Henri Richard (left). MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Rex Layne, 29½, Salt Lake City, scored a split 10-round decision over young Mike Hammer, 19½, Detroit, Tuesday night before 2,464 fans at the auditorium.

There were no knockdowns but both fighters suffered slight cuts above the eye.

Mayor Fred Hume has said he will ask city council to support a bid to the provincial government for a roof over additional seats.

The Grey Cup game proved the stadium is not just for use by Vancouver residents," he said.

Betzel Named To Pilot Leafs

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Bruno Betzel, veteran minor league manager and coach, has been named manager of Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League by owner Jack Cooke.

'Dry Run' May Solve Baseball Headaches

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The American Association Tuesday agreed to study a "dry run" schedule including Miami in a conciliatory move toward Milwaukee Braves.

The Braves' persistence in trying to shift their Toledo franchise to Miami and the association's strong unofficial opposition has involved the higher minors in weighty problems that overshadow the regular player draft.

In addition to the Miami hassle, president Ed Doherty's league picked up a new headache when Boston Red Sox put their Louisville franchise up for sale after buying San Francisco in the Pacific Coast League for $150,000.

TRIAL SCHEDULE

Doherty called in reporters to say that a schedule involving

Charlie Lewis, manager of the Victoria Strathconas in the CSL, was informed this after a league meeting last week, and in Charlie's opinion it can't come any too soon.

Strathconas have a game scheduled for Athletic Park this Saturday afternoon against Halecos. If it doesn't happen to get rained or snowed out, it will be the second league contest the Straths have played this season.

That's why Lewis is in favor of moving the soccer schedule into the good old summertime.

"The good weather would increase our gates to 1,800," says Lewis. "Couldn't think of a better move."

But Saturday is in the more immediate future than next summer, so Lewis and coach Willie Hamilton are lining up a strong side to pit against the Halecos.

In their only league start to date, Strathconas lost to North Shore United, 4-2, at Athletic Park.

Key move may be the shifting of Ken Hibbert from centre-forward back to fullback. This was Hibbert's position when he played in England.

Other changes in the lineup will have Hamilton, Tommy Druce, Joe Robbins and Ernie Eastlake, who will be playing instead left, in strip. Another newcomer, Charlie Mills, may also play, while ex-Scottish junior Art Brack is awaiting arrival of his equipment and will miss the game.

"I think we've got the club now," says Lewis. "If we get the weather we'll take Halecos."

Straths have one more practice scheduled for Thursday night to solidify things before Saturday's game, weather permitting.

"Milwaukee was asked what it would do if the schedule was not practical. They told us they would give us some word. I guarantee we will proceed. Quinn has told us 'we do not want to get out of the American Association.'"

Ground-Air Duel Likely In All-Star Grid Test

TORONTO (CP)—The success of ground power over air power in the Grey Cup started an argument that gives this Saturday's East-West all-star Shrine game an extra attraction.

Fans across the country will be waiting to see if the ground attack of the western all-stars will prevail over the passing offensive of the East. Edmonton Eskimos' split-T ground attack in the Grey Cup game overwhelmed Montreal Alouettes whose main weapon was the passing arm of Sam (The Rifle) Etcheverry.

The all-star game at Varsity Stadium here likely will provide fuel for the argument. The western squad has 14 Edmonton players on it and the eastern line-up includes 12 Montreal men. In addition the teams are being directed by the opposing coaches in the Grey Cup final, Frank "Pop" Ivy of Edmonton and Doug "Peahead" Walker of the Als.

The West is expected to use the split-T attack as its basic formation and Ivy will be able to field the entire Edmonton first-string backfield. It has Jackie Parker at quarterback, Normie Kwong and Johnny Bright in the fullback slots and Rolfe Miles and Earl Lindley as halfbacks.

BURRIS OUT

The addition of Bright to the western lineup was made only Tuesday. He was named as a replacement for Kurt Burris, brilliant two-way Eskimo centre stricken with food poisoning after the Grey Cup game.

This time the Esk ball carriers may not have it so easy. The eastern team includes such defensive standouts as Billy Shipp and Bill Albright of Toronto Argonauts, Vince Scott and Eddie Bevan of Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Frank Dempsey of Ottawa Rough Riders.

The East's firepower will come from the passing of Etcheverry, who completed 30 of 39 passes in the Grey Cup game, and Tom Dubinski, the leading passer in the Big Four this season.

End Al Pfeifer of Argos, Dubinski's favorite target during the regular Big Four season, gives the easterners another brilliant pass receiver. Pfeifer, who caught 15 touchdowns passes and led the Big Four in scoring, will team up with either Red O'Quinn or Hal Patterson in the end positions or may be used as flying wing for additional passing strength.

The East's lineup also includes a number of power runners such as Pat Abuzzi of the Als, Tom "The Bomb" Tracy and Avatus Stone of Ottawa and Lou Kuserow and Hal Waggoner of Hamilton.

Packers Quit Cellar; V's Romp Over Elks

By the Canadian Press

Kelowna Packers of the Okanagan Senior Amateur Hockey League moved out of the league's cellar by drubbing the Vernon Canadians 6-2 Tuesday night. Penitton Vs downed the Kamloops Elks 6-2 while the Kimberley Dynamos defeated Spokane Flyers 9-5 in a Western International Hockey League game at Cranbrook.

In Kelowna the Packers scored five goals in the final period to completely demoralize the Canadians.

Willie Schmidt scored the first Kelowna goal in the first period while Bill Jones and Frank scored for Vernon.

There was no scoring in the second stanza but in the third Jack Kirk, Brian Roche and Joe Kaiser each tallied one, while coach Mo Young scored two.

Turpin on Trial

NEW YORK (AP)—The $100,000 assault-damage suit against British boxer Randy Turpin went to trial Tuesday, and the former world middleweight champion was labelled a "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" type.

The description came from J. Poland Sala, lawyer for Adele Daniels.

The boxer's lawyer, Sol Strauss, entered a general denial.

Miss Daniels claims Turpin overpowered her "by his superior physical and violent assaults." On the night he lost to Carl (Bobo) Olson two years ago, she says, he hit her because she refused his demands.

This marks the second time in the 20-year history of the AP poll of sports writers and broadcasters that Oklahoma has won the national title and the eighth straight year they have finished in the first 10 in the rankings.

Car Taggers Buck Commission Charge

The Corps of Commissioners' meter patrol will fight police commission charges that members have been over-zealous in handing out parking tickets. It was unofficially learned today that corps members will show that over 400 tickets for parking violations have been cancelled in a single month recently.

Date for the meeting, called for by the police commission, has not yet been announced. The commission said it would hold the session to remind the patrol that its main duty was to keep traffic moving, not penalize the public.

Police Chief John Blackstock told the police commission that the meter patrol is "getting the police department into disfavor with the public."

"We are getting too many complaints about the way tickets are being handed out," he said.

'Safe Driving Day' 24-Hour Traffic Test

No traffic accidents.

Just three words; sounds simple, but it's not.

But starting at midnight tonight, Canadian drivers and pedestrians are being put to the test to see whether they can keep one 24-hour accident-free period.

Monday 4,000 bulletins were issued members of the Victoria Automobile Club, urging alertness and care on "S-Day."

"SAFE DRIVING DAY"

"Let's see if we can't make it 100-per cent accident free in Victoria," said George I. Warren today, secretary of the club.

Purpose of S-Day, sponsored by the Canadian Highway Safety Conference with the support of Prime Minister St. Laurent, is to prove that if accidents can be cut down on one day, it can happen every day.

IN U.S., TOO

The campaign is being conducted simultaneously throughout the United States.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett has thrown his weight behind the drive throughout B.C., and has appointed motor vehicles superintendent George Lindsay to co-ordinate a campaign to bring the importance of the day to citizens.

Mr. Lindsay emphasizes that co-operation of pedestrians is just as necessary as that of motor vehicle drivers.

It is expected, and sincerely hoped, dramatic and convincing results will be achieved.

S-D Day will demonstrate that the place to attack the traffic safety problem is in the com-

HE WAS A HERO— FOR A MOMENT

RUTLAND, Vt. (UP).—When John Rowell spotted an abandoned car stalled on a railway crossing here, he leaped behind the wheel, drove the disabled vehicle clear just moments before the arrival of a freight train.

Two women who had jumped from the car minutes earlier thanked Rowell but remarked: "You shouldn't have done it. The car was getting old anyway."

community, and that responsibility rests with individuals.

The traffic problem, officials point out, is with us every hour of the day, and every day. Few there are who have not had a loved one or a friend either injured or killed by traffic.

Traffic is a situation virtually impossible for the normal person to escape.

The following facts give a harsh indication of the situation:

The death toll—In 1954, there were 2,586 persons killed in traffic accidents across Canada.

The injury toll—Last year there were 58,738 persons injured in traffic accidents throughout the dominion.

For every fatality, one or more persons were totally and permanently disabled, thereby becoming a financial burden to either family, the community, or both.

Money loss in connection with traffic accidents in this country is estimated at about $1,000,000 during 1954.

YOUNG VICTIMS

Such accidents last year were the greatest single killer of persons between the ages of three and 40. They were a big killer of school children, and of young people between ages of 15 and 24. They killed almost twice as many workers as met death in occupational accidents involving vehicles.

How many are doomed in the next few years.

Unless the grim death statistics are cut drastically, at the present rate it will take about 10 years to kill another 30,000 Canadians.

ALLOW FOR AGED

In Victoria, it is imperative for both drivers and pedestrians to allow for slower reactions by a large percentage of the population, as about 18 per cent are retired individuals.

Too many pedestrians, officials state, seem to believe there is a magic wall on each side of safety zones, automatically protecting them from vehicles. This is not so. There is no question of argument about who is right when one party is dead.

To help achieve the maximum of safety for both drivers of vehicles and pedestrians on S-D Day, the Canadian Highway Safety Conference has compiled the following "Ten" Commandments of safety.

They apply every day.

For Drivers—Don't speed; don't drink and drive; drive a safe distance from the car ahead; give the right-of-way to pedestrians at crosswalks; keep your car in good mechanical repair; keep your attention on traffic and the road; don't drive too long and become fatigued; obey signs; slow down in rain, fog or snow; treat other drivers courteously, as human beings.

For Pedestrians—Don't jaywalk; don't walk between parked cars; obey traffic signals; walk facing traffic on highways and roads without sidewalks; wear or carry a white article when walking on dark roads at night; be considerate of drivers; look both ways before crossing the street; make your walking habits an example for children; don't daydream—the price of that new hat won't seem important from a hospital bed; give motorists at least a fair chance to miss you.

In other words, use common sense.

SERIES BY HIS VALET

Hitler's Private Life

Failure of Sepp Dietrich's Elite Corps in Russia Battle was seized upon by Goering to stir trouble for Himmler
By HEINZ LINGE, Hitler's Personal Valet

(World Copyright, 1935)

Himmler's sun began to set in 1945 at Stuhweissenburg-Plattensee, when the Adolf Hitler Leibstandarte failed in a counter-attack against the Russians, who were moving on Budapest.

The "Lifeguards," which were Hitler's pride and joy, had been ordered in force for this attack. At this time, Hitler was in supreme command of all operations.

Sepp Dietrich, the SS commander, had sent a message to Himmler that all Leibstandarte were in position in force and ready. Himmler passed the message on to Hitler.

Delighted at the news, Hitler gave the word, "Attack." But Hitler had been deceived. The Leibstandarte were not there in full force and that attack was a failure.

Hitler was furious with Himmler. He gave orders that the Lifeguards had to remove the band worn round their uniform which read: "Adolf Hitler's Leibstandarte."

Even as his anger subsided he added the bold warning: "In future, I will take the standards away if they don't fight better." Quite openly Hitler was now saying, "I cannot trust even the SS any longer."

Goering, whose own influence was on the wane, was quick to seize the opportunity for a dig at Himmler. He pointed out that we on the personal staff, when in uniform, continued to wear the "Adolf Hitler" cuff band. He said we should take them off just as the troops who had failed at Budapest.

Goering was so persistent that representations were made to Hitler by SS Adjutant Guensche. Hitler replied, "My personal staff and only my personal staff can continue to wear the band."

Goering was not quite finished with his harassing of Himmler. He made a point of telling Guensche, "If you think anything is likely to happen to Sepp Dietrich over this, let me know at once, and I'll see what I can do to prevent it." Goering felt Himmler might try to order Dietrich court-martialed. But so far as I know, nothing happened except that Himmler, pretending to be ill, went off to a sanatorium at Hohenlychen near Hamburg.

There he remained until news reached the Berlin bunker that one of his officers, Schellenberg, had attempted to contact Bernadotte of Sweden.

The news that Himmler was flirting with the Western powers was confirmed by Hitler's brother-in-law, Fegelein, when he himself was court-martialed for desertion in Berlin. Fegelein was liaison officer between Himmler and Hitler, and apparently was in on Himmler's secret. At any rate, in an attempt to save his own skin, he disclosed what was happening.

This was another occasion when Hitler was in one of his worst rages.

If Hitler could have reached Himmler at that time, he certainly would have ordered his immediate shooting. But Himmler was safe in Hohenlychen, out of the reach of the Fuehrer.

When he had calmed down a little, Hitler pointed at the buckle of the SS uniform belts on which was stamped the motto: "Meine Ehre Heisst Treue" (My honor is fidelity). "And to think," said Hitler, "this is the man who designed that badge and motto."

Two Arrested On Bribery Try Charges

TORONTO (CP)—Two construction officials were arrested Monday on charges of attempted bribery of two councilors and two officials of suburban Scarborough township. A warrant was issued for the arrest of a third man.

Bail for the arrested men, Milton Winberg and Jack Weinbaum of Gramercy Construction Company, was posted by Samuel Brown, Gramercy president, and the two were released.

A warrant for the arrest of Peter Heskia, a real-estate salesman, was issued after he did not appear at Toronto city hall with the others for arrest.

The charges were laid after judicial inquiry into township affairs. The inquiry was started after the Gramercy company allegedly sent $500 cheques to the councilors and officials last summer. The cheques were returned.

Nude Calendars Cold-Shouldered

LOS ANGELES (AP)—No nudes on 1937 calendars. That was the word at a calendar salesmen's meeting here.

Roger Turner, sales executive for the Kemper-Thomas Co., Cincinnati, said: "All the major firms have turned thumbs down on nudes for the 1937 line."

"The industry felt it was demeaning to the advertising profession to continue the nudes. Calendars were getting rarer and rarer until they were approaching the pornographic."

Typists Wary of New Keyboard

By TONY DICKASON

This is the new rearrangement of typing under study by the United States government, in its first Victoria trial. Advocates of the new system claim it would increase the average typist's output by 35 per cent.

Comments from typing authorities here on the question ranged all the way from "4 1/2 % to 7 % to 6 %". Government idea is to rearrange all the keys on the typewriter, placing vowels on the second row where fingers usually rest, when not in pockets, purses or trying to straighten out tangled striking levers.

Consensus here is that it's a good thought, though likely perishable. It's been tried before, and came to naught.

People, once trained in touch typing, find it difficult to adjust from the present thrown-together keyboard.

On this typewriter, which responds with easy facility to our use of two fingers and a thumb, there are 49 keys. This means possible variations in the keyboard are fabulous.

Automation Brings Revolution to Home

Staff of Mechanical Aids Does Work in Many Houses

An extension of the Industrial Revolution—two centuries old—has finally reached the Canadian home, providing a staff of mechanical servants for many families.

Here are some of the details spelled out by inventors, business men and trade associations that are the driving force behind the modern revolution.

Data gathered by many agencies

Hot Water Problems All Over

If hot-water questions have been troubling you, it is certain you live in the dark ages of hot-water heaters.

New, modern, automatic hot-water heaters are made to be forgotten. Of course, you may prefer to make your own choices about the temperature of the water. If so, you can have a heater with a dial. Turn the dial and the heater will produce water at the temperature you have chosen. But the thought you spend on that choice has to do with the water you use, not the heater.

If you have a modern appliance, it will go on turning out hot water indefinitely. You need never give it a thought.

In the dark ages, the heater had to have a special location and special space often was set aside for it. Today, that little table in the corner or in a row of appliances in bathroom, kitchen or laundry may well turn out to be the hot-water heater. Counter-top models are available, which use either gas or electric heat.

There are many other shapes and sizes. You can find one to fit almost any location you choose for it. Experts suggest you pick a spot near the point where most hot water is used in your house. You can avoid having to run the water which has cooled in connecting pipes. In the dark ages, you hid the hot-water heater. You can hide your modern heater, too, if you like. It is automatic and will work just as well out of sight. But you can get heaters that will fit into almost any room in the house. Modern design adds beauty to utility.

Many of them are finished in white enamel, like your range or your refrigerator. They will fit into your kitchen decor, stand beside the dryer in the laundry, or you can ease them into a corner of the bath.

You might put it in the recreation room. No, your toddlers won't run into it and be burned. Insulation is so effective the outside surfaces are not even warm.

You'll find a heater to do your job. Get the size, the shape, the finish and the heating speed you need.

cies show that homemakers are turning more and more of their tasks over to machine servants and doing other things with their time.

Sometimes they have jobs outside their homes. There are about 16,000,000 North American women with jobs and many of them are homemakers. But they are also doing other things. Sometimes they sponsor civic programs, welfare activities or cultural projects. In most cases they build richer lives for their own families.

EFFECTIVE DRYERS

Typical of the revolutionary machines is the clothes dryer.

In a survey of 1,100 women who have used mechanical dryers at least a year, 37 per cent said that labor-saving was the most important benefit they got from the machine. This reflects the fact, brought out in another study, that a typical woman who dries her clothes in the back yard carries up to three tons of wet clothes out to the line every year. Added is the labor of stooping, picking up, shaking out and pinning up each piece.

Another 18 per cent of the women said that time saving was most important to them. In addition, 31 per cent found that the dryers did a better job than the line. Drier clothes—while 14 per cent found most important the fact they avoided weather delays in drying clothes.

Another study showed that an automatic dishwasher saves from 32.7 to 62.2 per cent of the time it takes to do the job by hand. It has been estimated that the average family needs an hour of hand dishwashing a day.

WORK SAVING

Most dishwashing is still done by hand. Dishwashing machine salesmen say their product can cut a 45 million woman-hour work load in half. Their claim of a daily potential 22½-million-hour time saving is largely in the future.

Many other machine-servant savings already have been made. Our mothers and grandmothers wiped out the chores of stoking and regulating wood and coal cooking ranges. They installed gas and electric stoves, but even that saving is being extended. Modern stoves have automatic devices that take over much of the work of cooking.

Timing devices can prepare a meal when there is no human being in the house. Such devices are commonplace on modern gas and electric ranges. But there still are millions of families which do not have them. In the same way our grandmothers had iceboxes and our mothers had refrigerators. It was a triumph just to keep things cold. Modern refrigeration engineers are refining that

'White Christmas' Section Theme

In this special section international appliance dealers bring readers their recipes for a "White Christmas."

With the age of gadgets well behind the modern generation, electrical and gas appliances of today are a foregone necessity for the up-to-date home.

Information on these appliances, their use and function, are explained and illustrated in this special newspaper presentation.

The big and the small are here—from vast deep freezers to the smaller appliances, each thoughtfully worked out by the world's leading electronic engineers—for the convenience of the housewife.

triumph. They have scores of devices to make food easier to handle. They have others that regulate temperatures and humidity inside the box.

CHANGES MADE

Water heaters have been with us a long time. They helped make the Saturday night bath a thing of the distant past and make daily bathing a necessity.

But today's water heaters are far from the old boilers that helped start the revolution. Some of the sleek new installations fit beautifully into the decor of playing room, kitchen, bathroom. Or they occupy odd corners in the small new homes. Modern designs are planned to deliver more hot water faster and cheaper than ever before.

Washing machines are another triumph of the past. But the women who blessed the work saving of the first machines would be amazed at the changes.

Today, you put the clothes in, push a button and let the machine do the rest. You can have the kind of washing you need. Those grimy overalls can have a vigorous going over. The next batch may be delicate underthings that need and get the most careful handling.

And with the latest washing machines and dryers are the modern ironers that mean time saving in that department.

FREEZERS HELP COOKS

Home freezers are, perhaps, one of the most effective work savers. You shop at your convenience, pop the food into the freezer and use it when you need it. You cook, or rather prepare dishes, when you have time, leave them in the freezer and let your range finish the meal when eating time rolls around.

Because home freezers are comparatively new, the possible time savings are not yet fully known. Work habits are changing. Fewer shopping trips are made. New recipes and methods permit more saving of time, money and energy every day. Home economists suggest that freezers have always brought large savings, but that their big day lies in the future.

Year-Round White Christmas

Mrs. Maury Gwynne, 1013 McKenzie Avenue, is the proud owner of an up-to-date home freezer. She enjoys all its "years-ahead" features, which make possible bulk purchases, reducing the time she spends shopping. Mrs. Gwynne has found that a freezer not only saves her time and steps, but money, every busy day of the year.

Kitchens No Longer Unsightly

Kitchens no longer are steamy, unsightly rooms to be hidden when company comes.

The modern kitchen has become efficient, but it is also as charmingly distinctive as the home owner wishes.

It's the room where the family frequently dines and where guests congregate, in addition to being a handy, labor-saving food-preparation centre.

The new kitchens gain beauty from more careful designing of the things that go into them. Both the appliances used to process food and the storage cabinets have been improved.

Many homemakers find that a beautiful, effective kitchen depends as much on the necessary cabinets as on the refrigerator or the range.

Because appliances are steel, the same material is often chosen for the cabinets. These are now available in a wide array of sizes and shapes that can remain gay and charming while teaming with modern appliances.

One effective team is the built-in and the cabinets which house them. The cabinets hold the built-in over the surface range while providing the necessary work surfaces.

There are also cabinets to go with built-in-the-wall refrigerators and freezers. For all the built-ins, the cabinets provide drawer space and shelves for needed equipment.

Some cabinets also house an exhaust fan with a hood which can be placed over ranges.

Dishwashers Aid to Santa

Modern Appliances Dealer Right Around the Corner

You've made up your mind you want a dishwasher for Christmas. You don't want to do another dish as long as you live.

So you go downtown to look over models and colors and discuss the matter with the man who sells them. You're just doing Santa a favor, finding out all the information for him in advance.

But what if you got downtown to find there isn't a retail dealer? What would you do then? The company that manufactures dishwashers may be nearly a thousand miles away. You can't possibly go there and bring it back.

If that dealer were not there, you would realize what an important man he is for you.

Lady, he's the man who took you out of the frontier and made you a woman of considerable leisure. You don't have to do without, you don't have to haggle with distant sources of supply.

Right there on Main Street, or just around the corner, the retail store is waiting for you. There you see all the models of whatever appliance you're interested in, says the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

You talk with the dealer, get prices, demonstrations and the feeling he's interested in giving you what you want. Besides being a good fellow, he's a good businessman and knows that only the satisfied customer comes back for that second sale.

You make arrangements with him, he delivers the dishwasher. Right there it is in your home, come Santa and Christmas, and all the exertion you've spent is that little trip downtown. You could even have telephoned instead.

You know that the retail dealer is a symbol of free enterprise and a vital link in distribution of goods to the public. You know that the retailer makes an essential contribution to a dynamic, high-level economy.

But where the retailer makes his biggest impression is on the personal level, in his individual dealings with you. And for an indispensable man, he's made it pleasant, advantageous and worthwhile to you just to have him around.

Laboratory tests show that dishes washed in a mechanical washer are cleaner than those washed by hand. One public health service test showed that bacterial count was smaller on the mechanically-washed dishes.

A test showed that diseases could be carried from one person to another by germs left on dishes. But the conclusion of the professors was that mechanical dishwashing can virtually eliminate the health hazard.

Still another test used ultraviolet light and a fluorescent dye. This method showed up particles remaining on the dishes too small

HEAT IMPORTANT

Experts say one of the big reasons for the better performances of the mechanical washers is the fact they can operate with hotter water.

Human beings just can't put their hands into water as hot as the dishwashers use.

Not only does the hot water remove the dirt, especially grease, faster, it actually kills germs. It is the same action used when milk is pasteurized.

You can dry your dishes by hand without wiping by careful use of very hot rinse water. But mechanical dishwashers do the job automatically and regulate the temperature of the water precisely.

Perhaps the health aspect of changing to mechanical washing is largely a hidden asset, however. Freedom from the boredom of dishwashing is the thing most women like.

Associated with the drudgery was the question of lost time. When they should have been doing things for their families and for the community, that long, boring job of getting the dishes out of the way stood as a barrier to worthwhile activity.

ENTERTAINING EASIER

In addition, almost all of the women who took part in this survey said they felt much happier about their entertaining when they used dishwashing machines. There was no immediate need to "get the dishes out of the way," they said.

They found no difficulty in changing over to the new method. But some of them suggested that a new user of a machine should experiment a bit until she found her own individual method of handling the chore in the new way.

Every woman who took part commented on how much easier it was to keep the kitchen neat. The soiled dishes could be tucked out of sight in the dishwashing machine until a full load was accumulated.

Most of them used their new machines only twice a day, doing breakfast and luncheon dishes in one load and doing dinner dishes separately.

Of course they found they used far fewer tea towels and pointed out that their machines saved them the time and trouble of washing, ironing and storing the towels.

DES MOINES, Ia. (UP).—Don Garason, eight, took a bottle to the grocery store of Robert Hooper who was accustomed to small boys bringing in bottles to exchange for money with which to buy candy. But the boy refused the two cents, saying, "Please credit that to my dad's account!"

She Saves Time, Trouble

The dream of every modern housewife, like Mrs. Ross Rickman, 3835 Diamond Street, is the time and labor-saving automatic dishwasher, which will make "doing" the dishes easier, faster and safer than ever. Underneath the smart lines and sparkling beauty of the new models is sturdy construction and engineering perfection. After-dinner moments can be spent having fun with the family instead of at the sink.

Planned Storage Will Save Effort

Your White Christmas appliances will save you an enormous amount of time and effort, but you can save more if you plan your storage.

Experts who advise the Women's Home Companion on home appliance problems say that most women could avoid thousands of steps if they just put things in the proper place.

For example, you probably keep your double boiler neatly stacked in one place. Why not keep the bottom near the sink where you fill it with water? Put the top near your mixing or preparation centre. And keep the lid near the range.

You can vary their recommendations according to your own work habits, but their suggestions are helpful.

Near your preparation centre, you keep food supplies in refrigerator and cupboard. There you need tools for cutting, mixing, beating, blending. You will also need cups and spoons for measuring, mixing bowls and pans.

Near your cooking and serving centre, you should have space for skillets, saucepan covers, forks, pancake turners, pot holders, cake testers and serving trays.

Near the sink centre, store food like potatoes that need cleaning before being prepared. Paring knives, vegetable brushes and types of pans which are filled with water before using also go there.

Naturally all your dishwashing supplies will be stored in this centre.

When you plan your kitchen, you can take it from there. The principles, the experts say, are simple. Try to place storage facilities at the point in which they will be used.

In some cases you can save yourself time by having duplicate equipment. Knives are often used near the preparation centre. But if you have another store of knives near the sink, it often will save you trotting back and forth between the two centres.

You can store things on shelves, in drawers, hang them on the wall or put them in special racks. Storage cabinets can be placed under counters or beside major appliances. And don't forget they can also be hung from the ceiling.

Freezers Preserve Health Too

With a home freezer you save time and money—and preserve your family's health.

You save time because your shopping trips are fewer and the preparation of the frozen food is quicker.

Whole meals can be prepared in advance—already cooked or ready for cooking—and kept in the freezer until needed. Cakes and pies can be made on an assembly line basis and preserved for months.

And it's so easy to save money with a freezer. Fresh or commercially frozen food, bought in quantity when plentiful and priced low, can be stored with quality unimpaired.

Left-overs can be popped into the freezer, kept for weeks, and served when the family is eager for the same dish again. Food spoilage is eliminated.

WATCH VARIETY

Not to overlook variety. You'll be serving your family the tastiest and most nutritious meals it ever had. All the flavor and health-giving minerals and vitamins of fresh foods will be yours with a freezer.

The homemaker who likes to put up her own fruits and vegetables will be delighted with freezing—quicker, cleaner and cooler than canning.

If you're a home gardener, you'll have your own strawberries in December—with a freezer.

There are two types of freezers: chest and upright. But there are many models and sizes.

Modern Homes Can Be Built The Easy Way

Your White Christmas is going to last. When you install new, modern appliances, they will be in use for many years. But, more than that many families find it more convenient to set up modern living by easy stages.

There will be other White Christmases when you get appliances which are only in the planning stage now. But even if you can't put everything into the house at one time, there is every reason to look ahead.

You may only be getting one new appliance this Christmas. Or maybe several. At the same time you can do the spade work for the others that will come in the years ahead.

Possibly you may have to make changes in plumbing or wiring to handle the new equipment. It is almost certain you will have to check up on such problems.

PLAN FOR LATER

When the man comes to tell you about wiring or plumbing, ask him about the future. Often you can save money, fuss and trouble if you have everything done at this time. Make sure your wiring will handle all the equipment you want. Make sure that plumbing connections are available for the future.

The same thing is true about your own planning. Your kitchen or your laundry is being planned so that it will fit the equipment you will get now. When you get more next year or the year after, will you be worrying and scrambling, hunting space in which to put it?

That would be foolish. When you plan, you can lay out the space for the new freezer or the new ironer that you may not be getting this year, but will be getting later. Maybe you will want a larger or a different refrigerator. Measure up for size and allow for it.

Then when the time comes for the new item, it can be slipped into the space allotted for it with little effort or expense.

POWER CHANGES

When you plan for appliances, you are doing more than acquiring another piece of merchandise. In a very real sense, these are servants who take over the hard labor and even some of the thinking of household tasks. You are changing your own lives.

If you are doing it step by step, you will find that the first big piece of really modern equipment is likely to require changes in the flow of power, water and waste facilities. Keep in mind that other equipment will also need changes in old-fashioned living methods.

Often the changes for the present and the changes for the future can be made more conveniently if they are all done now.

Even if that's not possible, you can plan for the future. Leave the connections available where facilities for other years can be attached.

For Stand-Up Cooking

The dramatically new electric cooking units fully meet the approval of Miss Joan Lailey, 150 Douglas Street. They feature eye-level visibility for all oven cooking and broiling, completely away from the top burners. New units save labor and valuable space and do away with bending and stooping.

Build Color Scheme Around Appliances

Your new home appliances have been selected, wrapped and delivered. Right now they're standing in their proper places in the kitchen, receiving admiring attention.

But, chances are, you're not going to stop there.

Likely the very next thing you'll do is go ahead with your color scheme built around your appliances and designed to make your kitchen a room of beauty and charm.

The laundry room, which may be a part of the kitchen, can be considered with it in the decorating scheme. If the laundry room is visible from the kitchen it's a smart idea to use the same color plan.

If the new range and refrigerator and dishwasher—or washer and iron—are white, you'll probably want to use color to enhance the gleaming beauty of the appliances and at the same time relieve the room of the antiseptic, hospital effect. A lot of time is spent in the kitchen—and you'll want it to be cheerful and livable.

PLACE FOR COLOR

If white steel cabinets are used, and the appliances are white, too, color can be used effectively in curtains and wall and floor coverings. White contrasted with, say, chocolate brown or charcoal walls, with red or pink counters, could be an attractive combination.

Although white appliances are still out ahead, color is coming up fast. If your appliances are colored, your first decision is whether to use corresponding or contrasting colors.

There are many combinations of two or more colors that would reflect good taste and individuality, and at the same time not tire or grate on your nerves after a few weeks.

You can now get paint that will mix with, or match approximately, your appliances and give a professional decorator's look after you've put it on yourself.

A perfect match isn't possible because the appliance colors are applied by spray and baked. Their sheen and glow make them appear different from the brushed-on product, regardless of color accuracy. However, it is possible to get paints accurate enough for use near the appliances.

FAVORITE COLORS

Green and yellow are top favorites, both in appliance and overall color plan. Pink is becoming increasingly popular, and blues and browns are always good.

Shades range from palest yellow, beige and gray to blues and greens, cocoa, pink, red and copper.

And if you can't find exactly what you have in mind, you can always mix your own paint for that excitingly different look.

A group of New York artists have created three colors—actually new shades of the primary colors—that they insist will not clash with anything. This out-dates white, they say, as the only true "neutral" color for decorating. Their colors are called dawn yellow, meridian blue and sunset copper. Several manufacturers are using these colors on their appliances.

If you're on a do-it-yourself kick, painting walls, ceiling, cabinets and kitchen furniture yourself will keep the price of decoration at a minimum while allowing a maximum of imagination range.

Just don't get carried so far away you make a glaring, eye-blinding hodgepodge of it.

CHOICE IS WIDE

For counters and sinks there are the new plastic surfacings which are heat and stain-resistant. They're available in a wide choice of colors to contrast or approximately match your appliances or dominant color.

Walls may be painted or wallpapered.

WATCH THAT DOOR

One home economist estimates that the average American family opens its refrigerator door 70 times a day in hot weather and 50 times a day the rest of the year.

Washday Easy Done This Way

Washday! Is that a bad word for you?

When you get the new home-laundry appliances, you will find it need not be. In fact, there may not be any washday. You may find it easier to push the button and let your new automatic washer turn out clean clothes any time you have a load for it.

Meanwhile, many families are planning home-laundry centres that make a mockery of the old unpleasant places where clothes were scrubbed until they were clean.

You can put them almost any place. They fit nicely into the kitchen if you have enough room. You might close in that little porch and place the laundry there. Some of the new equipment is small enough to fit into a small space.

Many modern laundries are in the basement, right where so many of the old-fashioned kind were found. You might not recognize the new ones if you are used to the old.

Laundry areas can be colorful places. Walls, ceilings, floors, woodwork, curtains, are all spots where bright splashes of color can be used.

On the other hand, there is no reason why a white laundry should not be a pleasant place. They are so pleasant that modern homemakers frequently combine them with other rooms.

If you decide to put your laundry in the kitchen you can combine cooking activity with the push-button operations of washing and drying. Another combination which also works well is a laundry and a recreation room. You can turn out batches of clean clothes while the children are playing.

If there are small children, a play pen or a crib in that room will permit you to keep your eye on the youngsters while you are washing.

Major comfort for you, however, can be gained by planning a room in which it is a pleasure to work. First item on that program is the proper selection of the appliances themselves.

You will want one of the new automatic washers. At least one type of these can also be used as a dryer. Automatic drying of clothes is also something that you will want to adopt. Get the kind of equipment that fits your wishes.

Also, when you get your new cooking equipment, you may wish to move the old stove into the laundry. But you no longer need a stove there to boil your clothes.

That process virtually disappeared with the mechanical washer. Now the automatic washer, often operating in conjunction with an automatic water heater, takes care of water-heating processes.

The experts who advise the Woman's Home Companion on home appliances also point out that floor coverings, lighting and the material you use for table tops are all important in making washing time pleasant as well as easy.

If you have your laundry in your basement, it probably has a concrete floor. Many of the new floor coverings are appropriate for this kind of surface. You can make that drab floor a colorful asset to the laundry.

Light that reveals the details of a room may not have been much of an asset in old and drab laundries. But if you have dressed your room up, why not get enough light so you can see it?

Sure, you can get along with lights that focus on the work areas. But here you are making a new kind of life. Learn to see it and enjoy it!

Your laundry work surfaces can be just as important as those in your kitchen. There are a number of hard finishes which are appropriate to the laundry. Look them up.

And planning ahead is just as important when you plan a new laundry as in a kitchen. If you are trying to fit it into a small space, the size of the appliances will be important.

If you have not had your wiring checked, it will be a good idea to find out if changes are needed.

How about your water pressure? Consult your dealer about whether the appliance you are buying will fill properly with the pressure you have available.

You can plan out your laundry space just as you did with your kitchen. Make scale drawings of the space and cardboard cutouts to scale showing the appliances. Then move the cutouts around until you have the arrangement you want.

Of course you won't put your dryer a long distance from your washer, but there will be less worry at planning time about the flow of work in your laundry than there was in your kitchen.

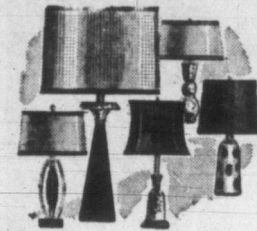

You can devote much of your planning to making this room a place where you can go with a smile to let your automatic, mechanical servants do the work.

Cooking With Gas a Treat

Cooking on this strikingly attractive and modern gas range is a treat, says Mrs. J. R. Hassell, 1925 Foul Bay Road. Today's ranges, like the model shown with automatic double oven, easy-to-view windows and clean, streamlined functional styling bring more beauty into the home and duty in the kitchen.

Modern Machines Constantly Change

Millions of families are putting new appliances into their homes. In very many cases they are discarding old equipment still in working condition to do it. And by standards of a few years ago much of this equipment is not very old.

Unless you have followed recent changes closely you may be puzzled. This country already has more machines in its homes than any other country. Why this sudden spurt in the use of appliances? you may well ask. For such questions it is well to consult expert opinion. The answers can be simplified if they are limited to one appliance—cooking ranges. Almost every family has one. Why are so many people discarding what they have and getting others? Willard S. Johannsen, publisher of Electrical Dealer Magazine, speaks for the electrical people. The American Gas Association speaks for the gas industry. Each supplied a list of things that their customers seek when they change ranges. A comparison of the lists showed at once that type of fuel is not of major importance at this time. You can have almost any feature you desire in either a gas or an electric range. Johannsen cites built-in ovens, new arrangements of surface cooking units and color finishes as very important to many people at this time. The gas report stresses automatic controls—the on-off clock control, temperature control, timed shut-off, timed turn-down. But the experts keep right on listing things. They show that the range you get today is far different from anything you could buy even a few years ago. On both lists are grills, rotisseries, deep-well cookers. On down the lists are thermostatic shut-offs, oven windows, built-in griddles, deep-fat fryers, hinged cooking tops. Some people want two ovens in their range. Some want larger ovens. The ranges serve to tell the story. Here are basic appliances. Even old people have been familiar with them since infancy.

Statisticians Can Measure Your Leisure

While leisure, happiness, health, comfort and other desired intangibles don't lend themselves to statistical measurement, the vast scope of home appliance revolution can be illustrated numerically.

The electric industry says it has sold 388,000,000 home appliances in North America since 1949. That is an average of about eight for every home in the U.S. and Canada.

In 1930 there were 19 different kinds of major electric appliances. By 1940 there were 36. Last year there were 54 and many more are on the drawing boards.

For a single year (1934) there were 2,023,200 gas ranges and 2,281,100 automatic gas water heaters sold in the U.S. Almost 40,000,000 of these two items alone have been sold since 1946.

MORE TO COME
Some of the appliances to which the figures refer were small and expendable. The average home probably does not have as many new machines as the totals would indicate because some have been thrown out and replaced.

But students of the markets believe that Canada has not yet begun to use home appliances. That does not mean the market is not booming. Canadians are getting new machines for home use at every turn. There are, however, very real indications that the future will see use of household machines that would amaze today's families.

For one thing, the electric utility industry says the wires in most of today's homes just won't take care of many more really big appliances. The figures show about 70 per cent will take a few small electric appliances besides lights and that's all.

EXPANSION EXPECTED
Couple that figure with the tremendous interest shown in displays and exhibits of new home equipment, and many salesmen predict a vastly expanded market after more families put in the wiring they need.

Market experts say that some of the most useful of the newer appliances have reached comparatively few homes. Dishwashers, freezers, clothes dryers and ironers are in that category.

In another class are appliances which have been with us longer. Almost all families have some kind of a cooking range.

Most have some supply of hot water. Refrigerators are nearly universal and a very large number of families have some type of washing machine.

For these items, a very large part of the sales are replacements. But improvements made in such machines in the past few years almost make the new ones different in kind rather than degree. Appliances are turning automatic.

There is a great difference between an appliance you have to run and one that operates automatically after it is turned on. Students of the situation say that there is a pent-up demand.

For example, many of the clothes-washer sales still are old-type machines which have to be hand-operated. But the number of these is dropping and the trend seems to show that within a short time few families will accept anything but automatic machines.

Appliances Can Signal To Handler

Some of your modern mechanical servants can talk. Most of them won't tell the baby a story or gossip about your neighbor, but they have important things to say. They come equipped with signal lights, bells and dials that give you a very good idea what they are doing.

And while you are learning the appliance language, there are other ways of checking up on your new helpers. One of the most important is windows. Many of the ovens, dishwashers, clothes washers, clothes dryers and other devices have built-in glass panels. You can look inside while they are in operation and see what is happening.

Later you will find that some appliances have another language. Your dishwasher, clothes washer or dryer is likely to give characteristic sounds when it is operating. Some refrigerators or freezers have a hum that can be heard when they change cycle. Of course, other types of appliances are completely silent. But some people like to have their helpers talk to them.

Home Comfort Came Slowly

It was a long road to home comfort.

Early in the Middle Ages, the fire was in the middle of the floor and smoke escaped through a hole in the roof.

Chimneys were a great innovation. You can call them the first appliances.

Then, for centuries, cooking was done at an open fireplace.

Lighting also moved slowly. William Murdoch, a British engineer was the first to light his house with gas in 1792. He heated coal in an iron retort and piped the gas through the house. Many of our older citizens still remember the era of gaslights.

Today, you take electric lights for granted.

You are in an era of swift development in home appliances. Some of the most ultramodern are powered by electricity.

Scientist Discovers Sponge Has 'I Am' On New Appliances

WASHINGTON (NANA) — Few philosophers or scientists have delved deeper into the abysses of life than Dr. Paul Galtsoff, director of the U.S. fish and wildlife service laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass.

He works officially with lowly organisms—oysters and clams. But there creatures have come far up the ladder of evolution. They may be closer to men than to sponges and they throw little light on the mysterious forces that, down at the bottom, organized single-celled into complex assemblies with nervous systems, hearts, lungs, and hundreds of other highly specialized conglomerations.

Very close to the bottom of multicelled animal life is the sponge. Despite appearances it is a genuine animal—like a clam or a man—and has no relationship to the plants that it looks and acts like.

MYSTERY FORCE

The sponge, superficially, is just a conglomeration of cells—an apparently orderless assembly of millions or billions of individual animals, each about a thousandth of an inch long. It is an animal without brain, nervous system, muscles, blood or stomach. But it has, Dr. Galtsoff found in experiments carried out in Washington a few years ago, an "I am." There is a mysterious force in the apparently rulerless sponge society that may be one of the initial steps from the complete individualism of single-celled protozoa to the highly autocratic society of the body of an elephant or an oyster.

When the sponge conglomeration is split into single cells, as can be done by a highly specialized technique of straining through fine-meshed silk gauge, the cells continue to live as individuals. They crawl about; they absorb nourishment. But when they are thrown together into a tank of sea water they will conglomerate again in a short time into the same sponge as existed before the disintegration.

There are many species of sponges. They are distinguished, very specifically, by the arrangement of the complex network of water canals that run through the body and by the arrangement of the needle-like spicules of silica, almost glass, which constitute the supporting structure of the body.

If two sponges of different species are disintegrated after being dyed red and blue and thrown into the same tub of sea water, all red cells will get together in one mass and all blue cells in another. The species will retain their apartness. In some way the individual animals, set free from their prison within the sponge body, know to which conglomeration they belong and where they belong within it.

Very shortly after the cells are dumped in the water, says Dr. Galtsoff, certain cells known as archeocytes start to move. They pick up all the other types of cells that make up the complete sponge. When they brush against a cell of the same species it is as if their bodies were covered with glue.

Up to a certain point, Dr. Galtsoff says, the sponge is a complex and beautifully organized animal. It is doubtless a long way up the ladder from the beginning of multicellular animal life, although its predecessors are lost in the darkness of impenetrable antiquity.

The sponge, of course, cannot be considered the ancestor of anything else. It represents the end of its own line of evolution. The ancestors of the higher animals came from some completely lost stock, the structural elements of whose bodies were of calcium and not glass. In some way calcium seemed to fulfill better the requirements for progress. If higher animals had descended from the sponges they would have glass bones. It has been speculated that this is just what would be found in inhabitants of some other planet where environmental conditions might have preferred silica to calcium.

The people who make and sell your home appliances hope you will read the directions that come with them. It's just a hope, but sometimes they get pretty discouraged.

Manufacturers labor over directions for use of their products. They try to put their reports into language anyone can understand.

Often, they are quite elaborate. Your shiny, new appliance comes with a beautifully printed booklet telling you how to get the most out of it. Other manufacturers try to prevent directions from getting lost. Sometimes they are attached to the appliances. Sometimes they are even etched into the steel of the appliance itself.

But most producers have become convinced that very many people will not read those directions. To meet the situation, safety standards of household equipment are put at a very high level.

In addition, every effort is made to create appliances which are as near foolproof as possible. In some machines that have been under development through many years of use this can become close to perfect.

For example, one typical refrigerator manufacturer says there is virtually no maintenance problem. The machinery is sealed in and is designed to run for years without attention.

This manufacturer says there are virtually no calls for maintenance. What few there are, come from people who not only have not read the directions, but do not know what a refrigerator is supposed to do.

Some other appliances require more active operation by customers than refrigerators. They have been made as simple as possible and they become simpler every year. But the customer who gets the most out of them is the person who knows what they can be expected to do and how they can be made to operate most effectively.

The directions are given you to give you that information.

Advertising Built Giant Car Rentals

They say Walter Jacobs has come a long way and he's traveled the entire distance in rented cars and trucks.

Jacobs is president of the Hertz Corporation, the world's largest vehicle rental organization.

In 1920, when he was 21 years old, Jacobs made a down payment on 12 used cars and began an automobile rental business on Michigan avenue in Chicago. His capital came from running a semi-private livery service. He also washed cars and, at night, sold cars.

Those 12 used cars—all were Model Ts—have grown to more than 30,000 automobiles and trucks. There are Hertz-owned stations in 35 cities and Hertz System members in 630 cities in the United States and Canada and 13 foreign countries.

Jacobs launched his business on the premise that people would want to rent cars for a day's outing or a business trip, just as they had used livery service in the horse and buggy days.

Within eight months his fleet of 12 grew to 30. In 1924 it was 100. Then he sold out to John Hertz, Yellow Cab taxi owner, staying on as general

HELPED BY RATIONING

The business boomed during the 20's. It was hard-hit by the depression, but the Second World War and gas rationing gave it a shot in the arm with the demand for rented cars far exceeding the supply.

With the end of the war, Hertz' biggest problem was to keep travelers in the habit of using a train or an airplane for the longest part of a journey, then driving rented cars at their destination.

The system upped its national advertising. Business increased. Since 1947 revenues have jumped 400 per cent, according to the company.

Do you know the difference between a refrigerator and a home freezer?

A refrigerator is for temporary storage of food at cool, but above freezing, temperatures. Some of them have small freezer units.

A home freezer, on the other hand, is a mechanically refrigerated cabinet to be used for freezing fresh, ready prepared and cooked foods, and as a low-temperature pantry for their storage until used.

'Any Ice Cream, Fellows?'

The curiosity is mutual as a polar bear and crewmen of the USS Lindenwald peer at each other in the frozen Arctic wastes. The ship was on a resupply mission to navy bases in the far north, and the bear was evidently on a scouting mission to find out who was intruding in his territory. Photo, recently released by the navy, was taken by an amateur photographer aboard the ship.

India Needs 15 Million Jobs By 1961

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—India is faced with the problem of finding jobs for nearly 15,000,000 people by 1961 in a race against the rapid increase in population.

Planners aiming at making India an industrialized country realize the employment problem is not just economic. Failure to solve it could create an explosive political situation.

India now has between three and four million unemployed out of her total labor force of 132,000,000. By 1961, it is estimated that another 11,000,000 will have entered the labor market.

Thus, to provide employment has been made one of the three basic aims of the second five-year plan which starts in April next year. The other objectives are to increase the national income by five per cent a year, making a 27 per cent rise during the plan, and to build heavy industries such as steel to lay the foundations of an industrialized India.

Appliances Even Have Personality

Appliances have personalities. Take clothes dryers, for instance. Over here is a big, well-proportioned machine. It is set up to do one job and it knows it. Flashing signal lights tell about the action as it takes a full load of clothes and fluffs them to warm, smooth dryness.

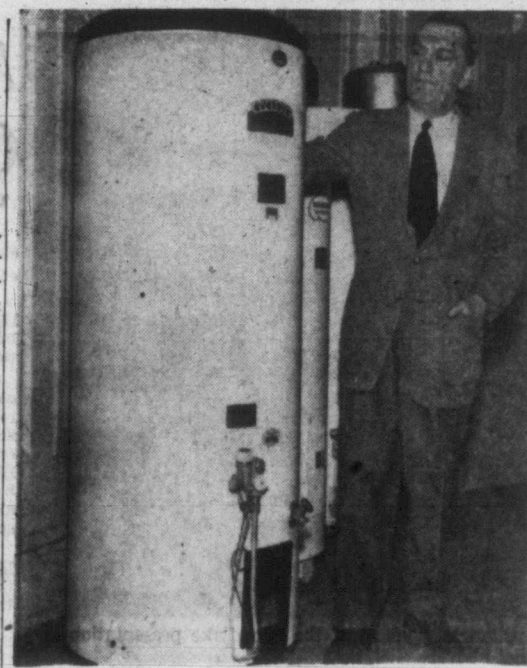

Or look at this combination model. Watch the swift changes as it handles the sudsing, slosh of a washing cycle and moves swiftly into rinsing. Then it changes again and functions as a dryer, acting with calm, stable accuracy.

Look again. Either machine may use the quiet warmth of gas or the precise utility of electric heat.

Effective? Either type of machine or either method of heating, does the job and does it well. But you will note the difference in personality.

If you were employing a maid or a butler, you would be on the lookout for personality traits. You would expect to find a person who could take his place in the routine of your household.

The same principle applies to the appliances you bring into your home. You set the tone of your house. The machines are there to do the work, just as the maid or the butler might do the work. But your preference rules

A Size for Every Home

Every home needs plenty of hot water. The answer to this problem is an automatic storage water heater, gas or electric. The proper size for your household will provide hot water around the clock without any effort at all on the owner's part. Showing this automatic storage water heater is Arthur Collis.

on the personality of the machine just as it rules on the type of servant you might seek out.

There are many manufacturers and each has a number of models of most appliances. It is not accident that the same firm often makes both gas and electric machines to do the same

Appliances Need Plenty of Water

Right Sized Heater Needed In Modern Automatic Homes

Modern appliances often require large amounts of hot water your old heater is unable to provide.

As homes go modern the practice of including two or more bathrooms, big washers, dishwashing machines and other hot water appliances increases.

One study of home water use showed that 80 per cent of the water a modern family uses is hot. It learned that many families frequently find themselves out of hot water. They have to wait until more heats, use cold water or use emergency methods to heat it.

Some experts suggest a rule of thumb. Multiply 25 or 30 gallons a day by the number of people in your family. Then make sure your heater will produce that amount.

They also suggest it is wise to expect larger needs in future years. In many cases this will mean an even larger hot-water capacity for your home.

Heaters last for many years, and changing over to a larger size, can be an annoyance. It also costs money to rip out one heater and put in another.

NEEDS CITED

Here are some of the reasons you need a lot of hot water. A tub bath takes about 15 gallons of water, a shower about three gallons a minute. The regular type of washer takes 12 gallons per load, an automatic washer 18 gallons per load. Hand-washed dishes require three gallons per meal, a dishwasher seven gallons a load.

Typical use cited by the experts:

Two showers, one shave and breakfast dishes use 22 gallons. One load of clothes, two showers, a shave and breakfast dishes use 34 gallons. One shower, one tub bath, a shave and breakfast dishes use 28 gallons. Washing three loads of clothes in an automatic washer can take up to 60 gallons of hot water in two hours. And there are often other uses for hot water in the home at the same time.

The experts say that, besides bathing, dishes and laundry, there are 136 uses for hot water in a home.

There are many types of heaters. Some manufacturers seek to supply adequate hot water by suggesting larger tanks. Others offer faster heating.

Some families prefer to use the furnace to heat water. This works, but the experts warn against the belief that the method provides hot water free. Adding water heating to the work of your furnace is about equal to heating another room in a modern home, they say.

A 'Must' in the Automatic Home

High on the convenience list in any all-electric home is the modern laundry, with matched automatic washer and dryer. Mrs. May Rutherford, 1705 Cedar Street, admires the gleaming finish of these appliances which offer year-round conveniences and make wash-day wholly independent of the fickle weather.

Food Processing Firms Appliance-Conscious

The food picture in your favorite newspaper looks wonderful.

But when you buy it, take it home and put in the oven, in the freezer or refrigerator, will it come out the way the picture promised?

Yes, you can depend upon the advertisement even though your appliances are different from those in other kitchens down the block.

The people who process national brands of food are even more appliance-conscious than you are. They want to know whether what they offer you will work in the many kinds of equipment that are found in the nation's kitchens.

MANY TESTS

The answer is found in test kitchens. There are many of these all over the country. Some are in colleges and universities where professors of home economics operate them. Some are in food processing plants. Others are run by manufacturers of appliances.

In the end, information from all these testing centres finds its way into the advertisement that tells you about the new food product.

But the advertising agencies do not stop there. They have their own kitchens which test every statement of fact about the food products they advertise.

Of course, that does not mean you cannot have food failures. If you have old equipment in which you have to guess at temperatures, the cake may be burned or fall, because the temperature is wrong.

If you do not have an automatic timing device on your range, you may forget and leave the roast in the oven too long.

But you can depend on what the ad says. If you are told to cook it 45 minutes at 350 degrees, you'll get good results whether your oven is in an old wood range or the newest gas or electric equipment—provided you follow instructions.

And here is one of the basic ideas behind the White Christmas program. It is easier to follow instructions when you have the new equipment.

Appliance makers depend on the food men to provide exact data on cooking, freezing and refrigeration.

And now the home-maker can depend on her new appliance to make it easy to use the data. Often he has put in automatic devices to make it certain. You turn the dial. The stove, the refrigerator or the freezer does the rest.

AVOID FREEZER BURN

The dry cold of the freezer draws out the moisture from poorly wrapped foods. In fruits and vegetables, color and flavor change. In meat and poultry this dehydration is called "freezer burn." Beef, for example, that is not properly wrapped is cocoa-colored, dried out, often with rancid fat instead of being red, juicy and full-flavored.

KEEP RANGES CLEAN

Cleaning ranges regularly can extend their lifetime indefinitely. Make sure the gas burner jets are clean. The air-mixture valve must always be adjusted or you can't get the proper flame for efficient heating and cooking. Don't check it yourself, though—let an expert do it.

Home Appliance Shows See Crowded Kitchens

The men who are trying to get the women out of the kitchen are packing them in—yes, packing them into the kitchen!

This paradox is being repeated in stores across the country when merchants put on special shows of home appliances. The women crowd into the shows to find out about the appliances that can, among other things, reduce the time they spend in the kitchen.

They also learn, at the same time that a modern kitchen is a pleasant place which can become a social centre, with dad, the children and all their friends getting into the act.

Many merchants have as-

If a Christmas gift could talk ...
Would it tell her how much you admire the calm, efficient, uncomplaining way she did those unending household chores that make her job the world's busiest ... and most important?
What gift can say that more eloquently than any other?
Why, of course! A gift that helps her with those chores ... a gift that makes her job easier and more pleasant ... that provides her with more leisure, more time for relaxation ... a major appliance.
Make it a White Christmas at your house. Give her a major appliance.
Major appliances now come in colors, too.

Canadian Ovens to Cook Acres of Yule Turkeys

How to Defeat Freezer Paradox

When you cook frozen food that has been thawed and use a small amount of water, cooking takes about half as long as with unthawed food.

You have run into this paradox with commercial frozen foods. But some foods need to be thawed before cooking and some do not. When you have your own freezer, you cannot depend on the package directions of the commercial foods. It is wise to work with a dealer who can advise you on the handling of food.

Appliances Fashionable Yule Gifts

Attractive at any season of the year, home appliances are high on the list of purchases by residents of Greater Victoria for Christmas gifts for others and for themselves.

A year ago this month more than 5,700 electric appliances with a value of $871,000 were bought in this area. Pre-December interest this year augurs that figure will be surpassed.

Dominantly white goods such as home driers and home freezers are expected to make advances in December, selling and take some of the spotlight from television sales which last December alone went over the 1,600 set mark.

A consistently popular item is the electric refrigerator for the reasons its market extends to homes wishing to replace their eight or nine-year-old unit with a new one and to others setting up house for the first time. Portable lamps, coming with in the realm of small appliances, are another leader which will go by the 1,000 mark. Based, too, on previous experience, the unheralded electric floor polisher will be another labor-saving appliance much in demand as a gift item.

Regulated Heat Better

Modern appliances are designed to give you more accurate regulation of heat and cold.

Stove burners, ovens, broilers, driers, washers, water heaters and other heated devices deliver the precise amount of heat you want when you want it.

The amount of heat needed is sometimes very small. Again, you may require large amounts in a hurry. Inventors have equipped most appliances with regulating devices and heat indicators, and heat-making parts have been refined to improve performance.

The same reports come from sponsors of refrigerators and freezers. Some refrigerators have carefully defined zones of cold for various types of food. Freezing compartments and freezers are so arranged that you can obtain the exact amount of cold you need.

MONTREAL (UP) — The main Christmas dinner course for some 15,000,000 Canadians probably will cost a few cents more this year, but a survey indicated today there will be no shortage.

Federal authorities and packinghouses estimated that more than 30,000,000 pounds of turkeys will go into ovens from Newfoundland to British Columbia during the holiday.

They probably will cost two to three cents a pound more this year than in 1954, mainly because the year's production has kept steady at some 35,700,000 pounds while demand has gone up, for two main reasons. One is that immigration has resulted in there being more people to eat them, and another is sales cut into supplies of gobblers that otherwise would have been kept for Christmas.

Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia and Canada's main turkey-producing provinces, but some of the birds are imported from the United States. It was estimated that about 5,000,000 pounds of those eaten in this country at Christmas will come across the border.

Quebec and Ontario get most of the business. Many of the birds sold throughout Canada will come from the prairies, however, because prairie dwell-

Underground Parking Lot Makes Million

CHICAGO (UP) — The largest underground parking lot in the world — Chicago's cavernous Grant Park facility — proved successful in its first year of operation. Park Commissioner Joseph W. Cremin reported.

As the garage observed its first birthday in September, Cremin said it accommodated 1,220,000 cars and collected $1,045,898 in fees during its first 12 months.

The garage, which has a capacity of 2,359 autos, handles more than 4,000 cars a day at an average rate of 86 cents a customer. It employs 60 persons on three shifts.

"Revenues collected were sufficient to cover operating expenses as well as bond requirements," Cremin said. He predicted that the 30-year revenue bonds which financed the project could be retired in 26 years if business continues at the first year pace.

Depression Fright Lasted 15 Years

MINNEAPOLIS (UP) — Amen Balkin, 63, trusts banks with his money again.

Police were astounded when Balkin dumped $5,754 in small bills out of a gunny sack when the officers arrived to order him out of his small hotel room at the request of the management. He said he had been keeping his savings in his room since he lost $400 when a bank failed back in the depression.

Officers explained to the odd-jobs worker that bank deposits now are insured by the federal government.

Balkin then was escorted to the nearest bank where he took eight tellers two hours to count up the money, most of it in dollar bills.

Separate Freezer Units Still Useful

Separate home freezer units may still be useful even though refrigerators sold in recent years usually have large freezer units.

Value lies in the fact that many were not designed for quick-freezing jobs, especially in large volume. But a refrigerator freezing unit is cut out perfectly for this work, and when used in conjunction with the separate unit, the latter serves as a storage place.

Some families may want and use both a compartment in their refrigerator and a separate home freezer, but some manufacturers have recognized that many people will not want to use both.

Refrigerators and freezers are now being offered in one unit. They have a full-size home freezer and a refrigerator without a freezer compartment.

Another solution is a refrigerator without a freezing compartment to be used with existing home freezers.

Some of the larger frozen-food storage units in the latest refrigerators have been placed at the bottom rather than at the top of the unit.

The fact that some people have tried to use their storage units as freezers is noted by an authority on freezing foods.

The storage units do the job for which they were intended. But most of them are not designed as quick freezing units, she says.

When large amounts of unfrozen food are placed in them, temperatures tend to rise too high. The result is slow freezing, often accompanied by discoloration of the food, softened texture and loss of food value and flavor.

Ironing Done In Jig Time

Old-Fashioned Way Caused Woman to Lift Tons Weekly

Would you like to sit down while you complete the family's weekly ironing in jig time without lifting an iron the usual thousand times?

Then of course you've asked Santa for an ironer.

And when you get it, there'll be no more aching backs, tired arms and cramped legs from standing hunched over an ironing board and walking up and down as you iron.

One survey says a woman walks approximately five miles and lifts 3½ tons for each week's ironing.

Using an ironer is almost like taking a breather in the day's activities. You sit down comfortably, and pretty soon the ironing's done.

Operating an ironer for maximum results is not as intricate as working an equation in nuclear physics, nor probably as stimulating as a good game of bridge. But it is a challenge in a way.

There are considerably more facets to using an ironer than plying the hand iron. With the latter you can plough on through thick or tin, and come through wrinkled or pucker, the garment will eventually get ironed by sheer force of manual pressure. It's not like that with an ironer. Finesse and intelligence are needed to operate the controls and understand the most skillful way to get each piece ironed.

Not that it's an art you devote the best part of your life to learning. It's really quite simple — for any intelligent woman. If her appliance dealer isn't equipped to give her instruction on how to operate the ironer, she can learn it herself in a few sessions from a book of directions that comes with the machine.

A few rules, a basic understanding of how it runs, a little practice — and you'll be amazed how quickly and easily the entire family ironing gets done. You'll have more time for other things, and you'll be more rested to enjoy them.

NOT AUTOMATIC

The ironer is about the only one of the major appliances that isn't automatic. You can get a stove that will turn itself on when you want it and then turn itself off.

The automatic washer and the clothes dryer don't need you to help them along. And you know how self-sufficient the refrigerator is.

There are two kinds of ironers, cabinet and portable. The cabinet ironers cost more and require more space — but they have a lot of extra, convenient features.

The ironer works very much like a hand iron and ironing board. A heated metal plate called the "sole" is your iron; a padded roll is the ironing board.

TWO METHODS

This kind of ironer is called a rotary ironer because the roll turns and the fabric is ironed as it is carried along between the shoe and the roll. At least one manufacturer makes a flat-plate ironer, so called because it has a flat padded ironing surface and a flat shoe.

Portable ironers have neither table nor stand. If you get this kind, be sure to put it on a table that is the proper height for you to sit and iron with comfort.

Most cabinet ironers have two speeds. Thin fabrics can be ironed at a higher speed than heavy fabrics.

It takes about five minutes for the shoe to heat sufficiently. Then you're ready to iron. Of course you've already learned to operate the controls: the speed regulator, thermostats for heat control, knee or foot device for bringing the shoe against the roll.

EVERYTHING GOES

At first it's best to iron the flat pieces like towels and pillowcases. When you feel competent and easy doing this, try dresses and shirts as explained by a demonstrator or the instruction book.

In no time at all you'll become skilled, and the ironing chore will go much faster than it did with the hand iron.

Your ironer has special features. Some ironers have a red light to tell you when the heat is on, a safety release which permits you to remove the shoe from the roll in case of an emergency power failure, and shelves which hold garments or linens as you iron, and then fold against the cabinet when you're finished ironing.

'New Look' in Refrigerators to any housewife. Today's refrigerator models are designed to provide ample space and correct temperatures to keep food at its best.

Wire Adequately For Good Yuletide

Unless your house wiring has been worked over recently, chances are you don't have sufficient electrical power or protection for the new appliance you planned for Christmas.

It's no fun to plug in the exciting new gift only to find it won't work. It's even less fun to blow a fuse and have the Christmas tree lights go out.

Unless you know your wiring system, it's better to have an electrician check it. Wiring experts say. Many power companies offer free wiring advisory service, including B.C. Electric.

If your wiring is more than 20 years old, you can be practically certain it wasn't made to handle more than lights and a few small appliances. Even in the last 10 years, few wiring systems were planned to handle the big electric ranges, clothes dryers, air conditioners and the many other electric things in modern homes.

If you've already had trouble with your electricity it is doubly certain you need a checkup before trying to use more.

Do your fuses blow? Do appliances heat up too slowly?

Have you burned out motors? Do your TV pictures wince and lights dim when other appliances start? These are signs you may need better wiring.

Your electrician or the power company man should check on two things.

First, is there enough power coming into your house? The chances are there is not if you plan to get any of the big new appliances. About 70 per cent of the homes have old-fashioned two-wire services.

Such 30-ampere setups will handle your lights and a few small plug-in appliances for 120-volt circuits. None of the 240-volt appliances can be used.

More modern homes often have a three-wire, 60-ampere setup which is called minimum. This will handle lights, a number of 120-volt plug-ins and a couple of 240-volt appliances. But if you keep adding appliances, it is easy to get beyond the capacity of such installations.

Experts urge appliance-minded families to have at least a 100-ampere service. This has the same three wires coming into the house. But they are bigger wires. It costs a little more for wires and main panel. But you pay only for the electricity that you use and a slight increase in installation expense now will save you a big replacement bill later.

The second thing the electrician should check are the circuits inside the house that feed the outlets. You can have plenty of power coming into the house and still have trouble if you load too many things on one circuit.

If you have a 240-volt appliance you can't put it on a 120-volt circuit. And even some appliances that run on 120 volts must have separate circuits with nothing else on them.

MANY CIRCUITS

If you have a large number of appliances, you may have as many as 12 or 14 circuits working off a basic 100-ampere service line.

If you have one of the old 30-ampere service lines, you probably can have two 120-volt circuits at most.

The most important thing is to get an adequate power line coming into your house.

The next problem is to install circuits to handle what you have in the house and what you are buying.

Seal of Approval Guarantees Range

The lady of the house has made up her mind. She wants a gas range.

But in the store, surrounded by handsome new models, she is struck by an appalling thought:

How can she be sure the one she picks out will work right in her home, stand up after years of wear, be safe?

She can be sure—if the range she selects bears a little metal seal with a blue star on a white circle.

That is the American Gas Association's approval seal, the sign that takes the guess out of buying a gas range. And 95 per cent of all gas appliances wear it.

Before being awarded the AGA approval seal, a range has to pass hundreds of tests for safety, durability and performance.

One test, for example, is a rugged workout of the burner valves. A machine turns the valves on and off 10,000 times within a few hours. And if the valves stand up after that kind of treatment, they're really cooking with gas.

How does a manufacturer go about getting the seal for his appliance, to reassure the home-maker she's getting the best possible product?

When a manufacturer develops a new model, he ships a sample to AGA laboratories. Then the tests for construction, safety and performance get under way.

Take what happens to the range: Engineers inspect the range to make sure it is neat, sturdy and smooth-edged. It must be easy to install, repair, clean and adjust.

Further, it must be impossible to put the removable parts back improperly after they've been taken apart for cleaning.

That's only the first step, though. The engineers get rough with the range next. It's squeezed, pushed and loaded down with weights.

TEMPERATURE WATCHED

Walls and floors near the range have their temperature taken while the stove is operating at capacity to make sure they remain far below the danger point for causing a fire.

Not Much Meat For This Thief

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UP). —Police said a thief took $550 worth of drumsticks from a parked car owned by Joseph Friedman, of Flushing, N.Y. Friedman sells musical instruments, not chicken legs.

To determine the baking evenness of the oven, the engineers whip up a four-layer cake. The four layers are baked at the same time, two on the bottom shelf and two on the top.

After they have cooled they are examined with a photoelectric reflectometer, a delicate instrument which indicates any variation in color. All four layers must be baked an even brown to meet AGA requirements.

For the cook's convenience, burner trays must have raised sides and tight corners to catch spill-overs, smooth edges, rust-resistant finishes and easy removability.

Gas Services Now Complete

Those who "Make It a White Christmas" with the choice of sparkling gas appliances will find that never in the history of Greater Victoria has there been more facilities to assure them of service.

One of these is the result of special gas training classes which run concurrently with the night school courses and are jointly sponsored by the adult education division of Greater Victoria School Board and the B.C. Electric.

More than 40 fitters, plumbers and apprentices are spending over two hours a week at specialized instruction in gas appliance installation and servicing which covers the field of automatic controls, venting, piping and burner adjustment.

With gas having "gone modern," today's appliance is a far cry from that of yester-year and the course assures a field force to take care of every call, whether domestic or commercial.

Included in the studies are several field trips to the B.C. Electric gas laboratory where special equipment is provided. The provincial gas inspection department is also co-operating in the course.

A recent highlight was the visit from Toronto of a mobile workshop, provided by the Robertshaw-Fulton Controls Company whose presentations left no doubt about the dependability of today's automatic features on gas appliances.

Big Baby Brother Of Scottish Pipes Now 100 Years Old

WORCESTER, Mass. (UP).—One of the world's most unusual musical instruments is marking its 100th birthday this year.

It's the callopie or "steam piano," which long has been a standard fixture with circuses and carnivals.

Vermont-born Joshua Stoddard unveiled his invention here and his daughter Jennie caused a sensation when she played the callopie at Worcester's Fourth of July celebration in 1855.

Wide Range of Gifts In Household Aids

Victoria shoppers may not find all of the 50 different types of household appliances at their favorite appliance store but it is a safe bet the bigger percentage of them will be there.

Such is the marvel of electrical aids for the home that from an average of 19 in 1930 there are now over 50 different appliances in common use. The theme of the pre-Christmas showing "Make It a White Christmas" takes into account that the majority of task-saving appliances are now finished in gleaming white, although colored appliances are also available.

Special pages in this issue give information about the newest developments in appliances and offer guidance in getting maximum pleasure and enjoyment from them.

Dishwashers Now Moveable

Even if you rent a home you can get a dishwasher. It is possible to have one which is not attached to the building. You can take it with you when you move.

Water and drain facilities are provided by attachments which can be connected with the sink temporarily.

The free standing washers are preferred by some home-makers because some of them can be wheeled about easily. They wheel them into the dining area, stack the dishes in them and wheel them back to the sink for the washing job.

16 U.S. States Legislate On Radiation

CHICAGO (UP)—State legislatures, spurred by moves to adapt atomic energy to peacetime industry, have entered a new field of regulation and control.

Sixteen states have passed laws recognizing the safety and health hazards of atomic power and requiring employers to provide for the protection of the public and workers, according to Commerce Clearing House, a national reporting authority on tax and business law.

Eleven of the states have declared that damage to health as a result of radioactivity is an occupational disease and placed it under their workmen's compensation laws, it said.

Stamp Buyers Get Full Value In New Device

OTTAWA (CP)—The post office has come up with a machine that will give you 25 cents worth of stamps for 25 cents.

It's the result of four years of effort by postal officials to perfect a machine that would provide 24-hour service for the stamp-buying public and sell stamps at face value. Some machines operated by private firms do the same job but take a small commission on their stamp sales.

A Toronto firm has the contract for manufacturing the post office machines. Soon they will go to centres across the country. First installations will be in Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa.

The machine, insulated against the rigors of the Canadian climate, will take either Canadian or U.S. 25-cent pieces. Postal officials believe it is the only such machine with a coin-selector mechanism that will accept one coin to the exclusion of all others.

Installation of the 20-inch-high machines across Canada mark the first time the post office department has owned and operated such machines.

Wooden Schools To Return?

CHICAGO (UP)—One-storey wooden schoolhouses are on the way back, a Long Branch, N.J., board of education official told the convention of the Association of School Business Managers of the United States and Canada.

Harold W. West predicted that such structures will replace costly big school buildings.

Lower cost is the big factor, West said, in these days of soaring birth rate and shortage of funds for school construction. "Costly brick walls and fire escapes will be things of the past," he added.

But West conceded that in a heavily congested area, "there is no choice but to build multi-story buildings."

GE Suggests Teacher-TV

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UP)—The General Electric Co. has suggested use of educational television to solve the teacher shortage problem in New York schools.

A spokesman for the company's technical products department said that by the use of such TV, available, highly qualified teachers could be used more effectively in teaching a larger number of pupils than is now possible.

Historic Quotations About Canada Compiled For Edification of Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen

OTTAWA (CP)—Some famous quotations about Canada and Canadian history have been collected by the current affairs bureau of the defence department and passed along to the armed forces in the bureau's bi-monthly pamphlet. They cover nearly 450 years of Canadian history. Here are some of them:

Jacques Cartier in 1534: "I am rather inclined to believe that this is the land God gave to Cain." Voltaire in 1759: "You know that these two nations (France and England) are at war for a few acres of snow, and that they are spending for this fine war more than all Canada is worth." The poet Bliss Carman wrote in 1894:

"The scarlet of the maples can shake me like a cry. Of bugles going by." Sir William Van Horne in 1895: "Since we can't export the scenery, we shall have to import the tourists." Lord Carnarvon in the House of Lords, 1867: "We are laying the foundation of a great state—perhaps one which at a future day may even overshadow this country."

Anonymous Edmonton citizen, once, it is fit for nothing but to breed quarrels." Frontenac at Quebec, 1690: "I will answer out of the mouths of my cannon." Lt.-Col. John McCrae, 1915: "To you from failing hands we throw 'The torch; be yours to hold it high.'" Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 1897: "Canada is free, and freedom is its nationality."

DENTAL SURGERY COSTS MAY GET MSA COVERAGE

Extension of Medical Services Association coverage to include dental surgery will be discussed at the MSA annual meeting Dec. 12 in Vancouver.

Originally brought up at last year's meeting in resolution form, the proposed extension will be put to a vote this year.

Cost to MSA members would be increased, but details concerning employee-employer contributions in the province-wide medical plan have not been decided.

BETWEEN TIMES

By MONTE ROBERTS

I haven't viewed a modern phenomenon with alarm for several columns, so I hope you won't mind if I view one with alarm today.

(For the benefit of anyone who may have stumbled in here by mistake, I should point out I am a card-holding member in the International Brotherhood of Modern Phenomena Viewers-with-alarm, Local 1, and as such am entitled to view with alarm at full rates, and time and one-half for under-time.)

To get back to today's view-with-alarm subject, it is the modern phenomenon which has turned up in advertisements for the 1956 automobiles.

Before going any further, I must advise you this is a delicate matter I am about to discuss, and one which may require more finesse than I can muster. But I will try to keep it antiseptic.

Well, then, what I view with alarm in the current automobile advertisements is the tendency to picture the south end of a car going north.

Almost without exception, the car manufacturers have chosen to purchase vast acres of space in which to depict an area of the vehicle which is longitudinally opposite to the front licence plate. (Was THAT delicate enough?)

To make matters worse, the cameras used to take the pictures of this, er, portion of the car are placed low to the ground, exaggerating the vast size of the car, er, portion, to a frightening extent.

To me, this is a step backward to the horse and buggy days. In the horse and buggy days, it was impossible for the occupants of the buggy to avoid the view which is now being offered in the advertisements of the modern cars.

(Ed. Note: Mr. Roberts has forgotten how a few horse and buggy age purists solved the problem by putting the cart before the horse.)

But nobody can accuse the manufacturers in the horse and buggy days of blatantly depicting this viewpoint in their printed advertisements.

In fact, one reason for the invention of the horseless carriage was the difficulty of producing an advertisement of the horse and buggy from the outlook of those riding in the buggy.

To make matters worse, one leading manufacturer is advertising automobiles with the "Forward Look." And in his advertisements, all one can see is the backward look.

I am sure you will join with me in viewing with alarm this mad impulse to advertise modern automobiles from a viewpoint which should be reserved for the eyes of pursuing traffic policemen.

Let us have pictures of cars going north taken from the north.

The End. (There, I've gone and said it!)

YOU DON'T HAVE TO RING THE DINNER BELL more than once for Timmy, Signal Hill seagull adopted by neighborhood children since he broke his leg. He's always looking for a hand-out, says Anne McDiarmid, shown feeding friendly bird. Centre is sister Margaret and right Jimmy Parker.

INJURED IN LINE OF DUTY

Seagull Timmy Has It Soft

Injured in the line of duty while serving as one of the birds which tourists follow to Victoria, Timmy the seagull is now convalescing in the RCN married quarters at Signal Hill.

Timmy turned up about a month ago, in obvious distress, trailing his right leg helplessly behind him.

He had apparently run into heavy weather during a crossing from the mainland, and while he was able to fly, he couldn't walk.

One theory is that Timmy was heading for HMCS Naden hospital, but couldn't quite make it. At any rate, he was found in the garden of the home of Lt. Crdr. and Mrs. Ross McDiarmid, 105A Signal Hill.

The kiddies in the neighborhood immediately went to his aid, provided luscious seagull-type tidbits, and soon found Timmy to be the friendly type, not in the least afraid of people.

Margaret and Anne McDiarmid, in particular, became Timmy's close friends, and they bandaged up his sore leg as best they could.

But the passing days saw no improvement in Timmy's leg, although there was nothing wrong with his appetite. Mrs. McDiarmid then decided the services of a physician were necessary, and Timmy was taken to the Oak Bay pet clinic, where Dr. J. W. Smith treated the injury and applied a splint. "First seagull I've ever had as a patient," he commented.

Timmy is now progressing favorably toward complete recovery. He is enjoying his convalescent period, and seems to be in no hurry to leave his free room-and-board-and-return-to-his-tourist-guide job.

UNIQUE GREETINGS

Coffee and Cake Party Set for Symphony-Goers

Compliments of the season will be wished their audiences by the Victoria Symphony Orchestra members at next Sunday and Monday's concerts at the Royal Theatre.

Conductor Hans Gruber announced today the gesture will take a form unique in the history of symphony orchestras.

As soon as the last note of the anthem dies away, the orchestra personnel will lay aside their instruments and their musically mien to become hosts to the entire audience at both performances.

Special assistants will be on hand to whisk away stands and chairs, a canteen and buffet will be set up and the audience will be welcomed to the stage to mingle with orchestra members and enjoy coffee and cakes.

It is hoped that at this orchestra-sponsored party, audience members will take the opportunity of chatting with their hosts, expressing opinions and asking questions that may have occurred to them during the half-season's listening.

It is a unique opportunity for musicians and public to meet on common ground and one that should be greatly appreciated.

Frobisher Delay Not Fault of Rivers Act

Federal Works Minister Robert Winters today denied a charge by Premier W. A. C. Bennett that the federal government's Bill 3 has delayed the Frobisher project in northern B.C.

"Bill 3 has nothing to do with it to my knowledge," said Mr. Winters, who is on a tour of government installations in the Greater Victoria area.

Premier Bennett blamed the bill, the International Rivers Act, for delays, which have resulted in the Frobisher group concentrating on a much smaller $50,000,000 hydro-electric project.

It would have involved diverting waters of the Yukon River to a storage basin in the south. The Yukon flows north through Alaska.

Mr. Winters was minister of resources when the federal government granted Frobisher a priority survey permit to allow engineering investigations.

Mr. Winters said that from the start of the proposal, "there was always the question of whether it would change the water level of the Yukon in Alaska to a sufficient degree to cause it to interest the International Joint Commission."

"Frobisher knew that when they first went up there," he added.

The federal works minister said Bill 3 "is not the problem." The bill was designed to block the B.C. Government's deal with Kaiser Aluminum Co. interests to allow the firm to dam the Lower Arrow Lakes for storage to operate hydro plants in the U.S.

BRIGHT HOPES It makes a federal permit necessary before any international river can be dammed for hydro or water storage purposes.

Frobisher officials have refused to disclose the nature of the "international complications" holding up their huge proposal in northwestern B.C. and the Yukon.

Mr. Winters said the federal government "certainly would like to see that part of the north developed," and that it had "bright hopes" for the Frobisher project.

Premier Bennett had stated that the Frobisher proposal to divert the Yukon River was "an open book" before the federal government enacted what he termed "the foolish and ridiculous Bill 3."

Sewer Deficit 'Not My Fault' Says Casey

Won't Resign He Tells Ash

Reeve Joseph Casey said today he will not accede to the demands of two candidates running for the reeveship of Saanich to resign from office over a deficit of nearly $600,000 in the municipal sewer project.

The reeve said he could not be held responsible for a mistake in accounting which led to discovery of the deficit.

He said the mistake was due to both the engineering department, and auditors.

He said he did not know what happened to a contingency fund for the sewer project, but presumed it had been used as a result of rising costs.

"I would have to ask the engineer about that," he said.

The reeve charged opponent Arthur Ash with "smear" tactics and attempting to discredit him.

SATISFIED The reeve said the sale last week of the last remaining sewer bonds reflected that the finances of the municipality are satisfactory.

The bonds were sold for 99.7 per cent, he pointed out, which indicated investors were satisfied with the progress of the sewer project.

The reeve still maintained that he did not know until the last council meeting that the sewer project faced a near $600,000 deficit. "The report was handed to me at 5:30 p.m. in a sealed envelope," he said.

"It was opened at the council meeting."

Candidate Ash said Reeve Casey's reply of "smear tactics" was an attempt on his part to give the public the impression the sewer deficit was "just a personal and political issue."

Junior Chamber Calls For Illuminated Homes

A Christmas lighting contest will be conducted in Greater Victoria this year by Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Merchandise prizes will be awarded to persons placing first, second and third in four classes:

1. Completely decorated home; 2. decorated window or door; 3. garden lighting; 4. novice.

Entry forms will be published in the Times Saturday and may be picked up at the junior chamber office in the Black Ball Building beginning next week.

Entries must be in the hands of the committee by midnight Friday, Dec. 16, contest chairman Neil Neufeld said.

There will also be a category for non-contestants who do not wish to compete for prizes. The class of Bible scenes for boys and girls aged 10 to 16 years will be changed and details will be announced soon.

Mr. Neufeld said lights must be on from 6 to 11 p.m., Dec. 20 to 23, inclusive, when judging will take place.

Entrants will be urged to keep lights on at least until Dec. 27, so that homes can be seen by persons taking part in the usual bus tours.

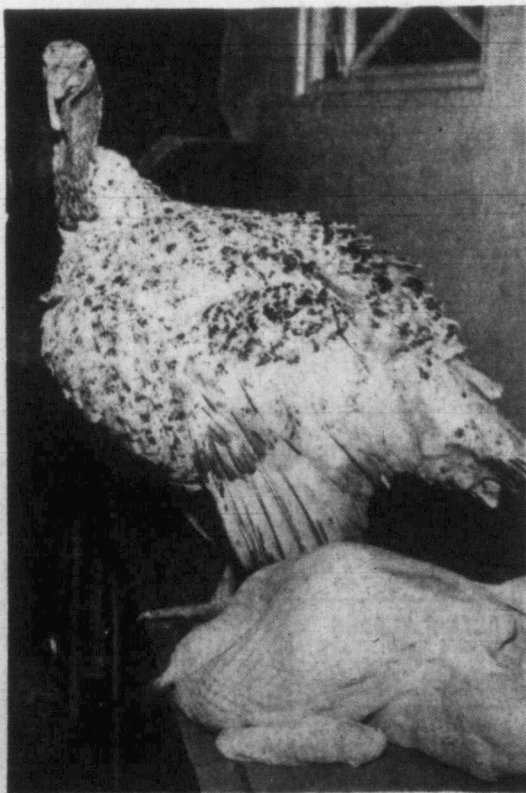

ASK THE TIMES

Q.—Can you inform me if all castles in Britain like Dunvegan Castle on the Island of Skye charge admission fee?—D.S.

A.—It is a practise in connection with a majority to charge for admission. In certain cases the National Trust, which holds many of them, does so. At privately held properties, castles and ruined abbeys, fees are charged.

Q.—What finally happened to Rudolf Hess?—A.B.

A.—When he last received attention in the public press he was still in prison, to which he was sentenced for life. As far as is known here, he is still a prisoner. There were reports that for a period or periods he was held in the prison's mental ward. He was 61 last June 24.

BEFORE AND (SOB) AFTER

Handsome Nebraska tom turkey Jerry, owned by C. McCulloch of Scotia Farm, Langford, broods unhappily over the future as presaged by, alas, his poor brother. But before the dread day of his demise, Jerry will have his moments of public acclaim; he is one of the stars of the ninth annual show of the Vancouver Island Turkey Improvement Association, in the lower ballroom of Crystal Garden, which opened at 10 a.m. today. SHOPPING GUIDE

'The First Day of Christmas
My True Love Sent to Me...'

By PENNY SAVER

Have we a romantic soul amongst us? Even if you won't admit to having any vestiges of romance in your personality, men, read on anyway, and perhaps you could be induced to at least pretend. After all, it's almost Christmas! And here's an opportunity to be really original in card giving. Of course you remember the old carol about the 12 days of Christmas, and all the fabulous gifts that were sent to a particular "femme." Well, come along feelas and I'll show you that time can be turned back, and you can do the same thing. "On the first day of Christmas, my true love sent to me, a partridge in a pear tree." So goes the first verse, and also the first card of the lovely series I found. These cards are made of heavy black, buff on white paper, with a faint tracing of music here and there. A picture of a quaint partridge in a pear tree peeks out from the first card.

As the 12 days before Christmas diminish, a new card is sent each day, bearing a gay picture of the gift for that day. The pictures bring to life the two turtle doves, three French hens, four calling birds, five golden rings, six geese a-laying, seven swans a-swimming, eight maids a-milking, nine ladies dancing, 10 lords a-leaping, 11 pipers piping and 12 drummers drumming. A clever new touch to the old tradition of sending cards. The box of 12 costs $2.

If you'd like to revive some of the older lesser known carols that have such charming melodies and true spirit of Christmas, take a look through the very good selection of carol books on display in one of the local music stores. There are piano arrangements for the primary or advanced students, and a selection of choral arrangements in one to four parts to please your friends who love to harmonize. Make sure you have at least one carol book in your home this Christmas.

Everywhere I go, I run into interesting candles, so I must pass on the news of their arrival and their super low prices. Little Santas, choir boys, angels, green or red trees, snowmen and deer stand about 2 1/2 inches tall, and cost just 35 cents for two. Slightly larger are the sets of carollers. For $1, you may buy two carollers holding books, and all bundled up against the winter cold, a cellist, and a lamp post, all candles. The set comes packed in a box for gift giving, too.

Tall candles for the dinner table or for combining with floral arrangements, are low priced, too. At the centre portion of these candles, they are split vertically into three strips, with the outer two twisted gracefully. Glitter and a small spray of cones rests at the base of the twisted portions. These are red or green, and cost $1 for two. These same shaped candles may be bought in larger sizes, too, at two for $1.25.

Three-pronged twisted all-wax candelabra in red or green cost 39 cents each, and are very effective for Christmas parties and family dinner table arrangements.

A bayberry candle, traditionally supposed to "bring luck to the house, food to the larder and money to pocket," will cost you 25 cents. Call me at 2-3131 for information about any items mentioned in the column. I have some more very attractive and inexpensive candles that I'll save for another day.

AS WE LIVE

Take Action Instead Of Bemoaning Your Lot

By ELIZABETH B. HURLOCK, PhD

Anyone can make himself unhappy if he sits around and feels sorry for himself. Instead, he should take action and try to improve things.

(Q) "I am 52 years old and was happily married until last winter when my wife died. I have two married daughters, both of whom live out of town so I am all alone in the house that my wife and I planned and built. My daughters come to see me when they can, over weekends, but the rest of the time I am alone.

"My daughters have both invited me to come to live with them but I have a very good job in an organization where I have worked for many years and, at my age, it wouldn't be easy to get a job of any kind in a strange community, certainly not one as good as the one I have now.

"So, I stay alone in the house with just our pet dog as a companion. I watch television at night, cook my own supper and eat alone. It is a very lonely life but, after so many years of happiness, I am afraid I could never find anyone like my wife. The lot of a widower is a hard one, I am discovering."

(A) Of course it is hard to be a widower, just as it is hard to be a widow. It is especially hard when one has had a happy married life and when one's children are married and away in homes of their own.

But your lot is by no means hopeless. Nor is it as bad as that of many other widowers. You are in the prime of life; your job is a good one; you have a nice home. Now it is up to you to take action instead of sitting around and feeling sorry for yourself.

I am sure your wife, if she were here to advise you, would urge you to look for a congenial person to share the remaining years of your life with you. She certainly would not want you to be living alone, even with your pet dog as a companion.

There are literally thousands of women of suitable age who would jump at the chance to share your life with you. Why not look over the available supply and see if you cannot find one who would be congenial and would make life happier for you than it is now? Your friends will help you in the search, if you tell them you are anxious to remarry.

Pineapple Enhances Fruit Cake; Gives Rich Flavor

Crushed pineapple adds its flavored goodness to this rich, dark cake. It was new on these pages last year, but already it has caught on with those who like a really moist cake.

The recipe makes about 15 pounds of cake, a nice quantity for filling the three standard Christmas cake pans.

ISLAND FRUIT CAKE

- 2 lbs. seeded raisins, halved
- 2 lbs. seedless raisins
- 2 lbs. currants, rinsed and drained
- 1 lb. glace cherries, halved
- 1 lb. blanched almonds, sliced
- 1 lb. pitted dates, sliced
- 1 lb. ready-cut mixed peel
- 2 cups crushed pineapple
- 2 cups granulated sugar
- 2 cups butter
- 12 eggs
- ¾ cup dark molasses
- Grated rind and juice 1 orange
- Grated rind and juice 1 lemon
- 2 tablespoons vanilla
- 5 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon cream of tartar
- 1 tablespoon cinnamon
- 1 tablespoon nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon cloves
- 1 teaspoon ginger
- 1 teaspoon salt

Prepare fruits and nuts, mix together in large bowl. Mix in pineapple (juice and all). Let stand overnight. Sift 1 cup of the flour over the mixture, mix well.

Cream butter, gradually add sugar, cream together until light. Add unbeaten eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add molasses, rinds and juice of lemon and orange and vanilla, blending well.

Sift together the remaining 4 cups flour, soda, cream of tartar, spices and salt. Stir into batter, blending well. Pour batter over fruit mixture, stir until fruit is evenly distributed in batter.

Spread batter evenly in pans which have been lined with three thicknesses of brown paper, greasing inner layer next cake. Bake in slow oven 275 F. until done, allowing 4 to 4½ hours for large cakes, 3 to 3½ hours for medium size cakes, 2 to 2½ hours for small cakes. Makes about 15 pounds.

Fruit-Filled Tea Breads Symbolize An Informal Yuletide Hospitality

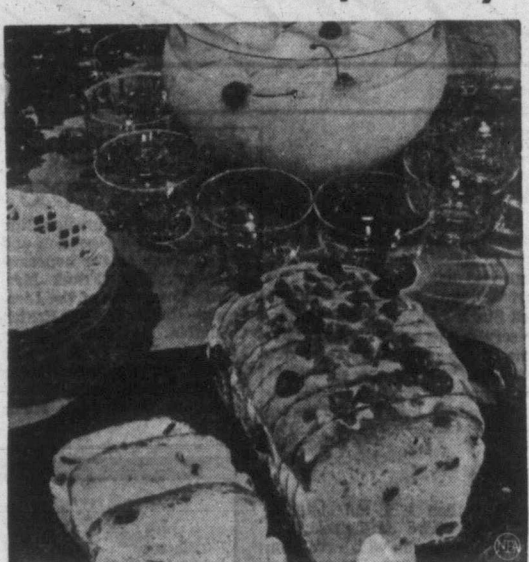

When friends drop in during the hospitable Christmas holidays, serve them your best fruited tea bread with tea or punch. It's a delightful way to express the good will of the season.

Here's a new way to make the service easier—slice it ahead of time and spread softened butter on each slice. Put it back together again to form a loaf. Each guest can serve himself without fuss or bother.

Sister of Sea Watches Head

WASHINGTON—An announcer stepped to the stage of an outdoor amphitheatre in West Berlin.

"I would like to introduce a friend from America," he declared. "Her name is Eleanor Dulles."

Immediately the audience rose to its feet with cheers and thunderous applause. It was the biggest ovation anyone received during the evening. And more than half the crowd had come from the Communist sector of the city.

For Eleanor Lansing Dulles is a popular and respected figure in Berlin—and not just because she is the sister of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

As special assistant to the director of German affairs at the U.S. state department, she has visited the city six times in the last three years.

LOVES BERLIN

"She cares for Berlin as if it were her baby," said a prominent German not long ago. That in a nutshell describes Eleanor Dulles' work. Since late 1952 she has been keeping close watch on the economic and cultural health of Berlin's western zone, which is a vital outpost of freedom in the midst of Red territory.

"I know the city. I know the people. I know their problems," she told me, sitting in her small office at the state department shortly after a recent trip to Berlin. "I think they like me. And I'm sure they don't dislike me."

Communist commentators in the eastern zone are probably the only ones who don't welcome Mrs. Dulles to Berlin with open arms. They predict dire developments—every time she comes.

One of her jobs is to make sure Berlin is prepared for another blockade by the Russians. She checks supplies of food, fuel and other items that would be needed in case of such an emergency.

LIKES PEOPLE

She also makes it a point to talk to as many persons as possible while in the city. She confers with the mayor, his cabinet, labor leaders and business men.

"I always go to a refugee center to see what the conditions are," she explains. "And I chat with workers and people on the street."

Unemployment has been a major problem in Berlin and one of Mrs. Dulles' chief interests. Once a government city much like Washington, it now must depend mainly on manufacturing and commercial business.

Furthermore, a constant stream of escapees from Communism comes into the city. Because it is isolated from West Germany, it is not easy to absorb them.

During the last three years, however, unemployment has dropped off from 300,000 to 115,000, according to state department officials. "Although she alone is not responsible," says one of them, "her direction of economic aid, work relief projects and cultural programs has been influential in boosting employment."

GREAT ENERGY

Eleanor Dulles has the same driving energy shown by her brother, John Foster. And the two of them look much alike. The other famous member of the family is Alan Dulles, who heads the Central Intelligence Agency.

Just prior to the birth of her son, who is now in college, her husband, Dr. David Blondheim, died. He was an outstanding philologist at Johns Hopkins University.

Shortly after, she adopted a small girl named Ann to bring up with the boy.

Professionally and as a writer she has always used the name Dulles. Since becoming a widow she attached a "Mrs." before it. Mrs. Dulles has been with the state department since 1942. Explaining her working relationship with the secretary, she states, "I don't say that his name doesn't help me when I travel and go to Berlin. People feel my being there is an indication of his personal interest in their affairs."

She points out, however, that her position in the state department would probably be the same whether or not her brother was secretary. And since she took office, she has learned

The first orange trees were brought to California by Spanish padres around 1800 for planting in the mission gardens. By 1805 the San Gabriel mission had a six-acre grove of seedling orange trees. . . . forerunners of California's renowned orange industry.

"She feels that a moment wasted is not only an economic loss but a sin," comments a colleague.

For almost 20 years Mrs. Dulles has had an unbroken record of government service. She's an economist by training and author of several books on international finance.

Morning Nuptial Mass Said For Sgt. and Mrs. Rostek

As Mrs. McKay played traditional wedding music, Miss Sheila May Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jones, 933 Wychbury Avenue, entered St. Andrew's Cathedral on the arm of her father, for her wedding to William Rostek, Work Point Barracks, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Rostek, New Waterford, N.S. Father E. Paradis said the nuptial mass, in a setting of yellow chrysanthemums on the main altar.

The petite, dark-haired bride, wore a floor-length gown of lace with a stand-up collar, lily point sleeves, and a full, tiered skirt. A tiny crown of sequins and pearls held a misting three-quarter length veil. White carnations were in her bouquet.

Matron of honor, Mrs. H. Rice, and bridesmaids, Miss Marie Rice and Miss Theresa Boyd, were gowned in mauve, pink and blue, respectively.

Their gowns were three-quarter length, with strapless bodices topped with tiny bolero jackets. Mrs. Rice carried white carnations and pastel blooms, while the bridesmaids wore small crowns of white feathered chrysanthemums and pastel flowers, which matched their bouquets. Best man was Sgt. James Driscoll, and ushers were Dick Neilestyn and J. B. Irving.

Sgt. Driscoll proposed the toast to the bride's happiness at the reception held in the Sergeant's Garrison Mess at Work Point Barracks. A three-tier wedding cake decorated in white centred the bride's table. There were 140 guests.

The bride chose a pink and brown checked suit with pink accessories, white hat and pink corsage for her going-away outfit.

Guests at Empress Hotel

Mr. and Mrs. John Ross of Edmonton, Alta., are at present guests at the Empress Hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Ross came west to attend the Grey Cup game in Vancouver and continued on to Victoria to visit their son, Holland Ross, a student at University School.

HINTS FOR THE HOMEMAKER

A fluffy cucumber sauce is delicious served with a cold, baked salmon. Make it as follows: Beat 1/4 cup of whipping cream until thickened, then gradually stir in 2 tablespoons of vinegar. Continue to whip until the mixture is stiff. Gently fold in one cucumber which has been pared, chopped fine and drained. Season with 1/4 teaspoon of salt and a few grains of pepper. Pile into a relish dish and garnish with a dash of paprika.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Men Are Subjected to Middle Age 'Change', Too

Middle age is supposed to be a time of stress for women only! At this age they encounter menopause and are often at a dead end in activity and interest because their children have left home.

Men are not supposed to suffer in any special way at this age. However many well qualified physicians, psychologists and psychiatrists feel that men also experience a "change of life."

While in the man's case this does not usually mean a cessation of fertility, the glandular system has slowed down some, and even more important, he is sure to look back and take stock of himself. He is likely to concentrate on what he has not accomplished which he had planned to accomplish in business and in happiness.

He may feel a profound anxiety because of age consciousness. He knows that it is difficult to change positions after the age of 40, and he may also suddenly realize that he has been working for years and years in a career which does not satisfy him and was wrong for him from the beginning. He may feel this way even when he has been successful in his career.

He is apt to think that after 40 or 50 his productivity will decrease. Of course just the opposite is true, because in industry and many professions the most responsible and most important work is being done by men and women over 50.

No matter how devoted a father a man may have been, he cannot possibly feel so strong a repercussion as his wife does when the children suddenly disappear from view. The children have been her daily and constant job for many years.

Nevertheless, he feels a personal psychological impact at middle age and also the impact of his wife's bewilderment. He may be subjected to the depression and vagaries of emotions which menopause sometimes dumps on a woman. Between the two of them, they may not know what is happening to them.

It seems to me that men should realize that they, as well as women, pass through a period of readjustment at middle age. They should know that hormone therapy often can help them as well as their wives; that an understanding of mutual problems will be helpful to all concerned.

Men are human and, as such, are susceptible to the statistics about overweight just as women are. Loss of overweight is one of the therapies, which apply to men and women alike. It will solve many problems!

I am offering my Tubby Hubby Diet this week. This will bring a man a loss of from seven to 12 pounds in 12 days.

If you are a man reading this column or if you are a feminine reader and would like to have your friend, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

NEW U.S. LABOR SYMBOL

This is the new seal selected for the combined AFL-CIO. It was designed by John Baer and will become the official insignia for the two labor unions on Dec. 5 when the merger convention opens in New York City.

Sneak Raids by Two Mice Tough on Man's Modesty

OTTAWA (CP)—Ladies, mice can make even strong men quake. Two mice which made a sneak raid up the pant leg of a 200-pound railroader forced him to disrobe down to underwear and shoes in his frantic pursuit of the pesky creatures.

The incident occurred in the waiting room of the CPR depot at Watskiwin, Alta. Luckily, only train crew—and no mice-timid females—were present.

Locomotive engineer Arthur Peacock of Watskiwin related his experience in a letter to a relative here.

"One of the two attacking mice was killed, but only after the engineer had shed most of his clothes and all of his modesty. The other mouse escaped early in the fray."

The mice apparently had sought shelter in the depot from a snow storm. They ran up the 35-year-old engineer's leg as he booked in for a trip.

"Next thing I knew they were under my shirt," he said.

"Well, I got some clothes off in nothing flat and out jumped one right under my chin. I thought that was all. So I got some clothes on again."

"Then one more bit my back, ran down over my shoulder, and bit my chest. Then down my leg and up again. And boy can they move."

"I'd got everything off by now but my underwear and shoes. The watchman and I finally trapped him between my knee and my shoe and slapped him one."

Days of Old West Revived At Alberta Cattle Round-Up

PINCHER CREEK, Alta. (CP)—Reminders of the Old West still survive in the Maycroft district 40 miles northwest of here in the Rocky mountain foothills.

Every fall for 40 years the North Fork Livestock Association has held an annual cattle roundup and this fall was no exception, despite the fact conditions have changed considerably since 1914 when the association was first formed.

The North Fork Livestock Association was the first of its kind in Canada and about the time it was formed large grazing areas were becoming scarce. Association members joined to send their cattle herds into the forest reserve to graze for the summer.

In early years more than 3,000 head roamed the ranges and in fall the ranchers spent long hours in the saddle, for grub a cold lunch in their pack.

CHANGING TIMES

Today the setting is the same but the circumstances have changed.

Smaller ranches and mixed farming have cut down the number of cattle run in these valleys of the Rockies until this year 850 were trailed out.

The work has been cut down, too. Don White, who rides herd all summer, and two helpers handle the roundup chores, bringing the cattle through the Gap, a cleft in the Livingstone range behind which the cattle run on summer pasture.

They drive the cattle through the Gap to Poverty Flat, so named because of its rocky terrain, where other cowboys join them in cutting out the animals by brands. In separate groups, the cattle then are trailed to the various ranches.

But roundup time still brings out the association members, now numbering 14, their hands and many interested visitors. The women serve a hot dinner for the riders in Maycroft Hall and old-time ranchers who no longer ride the ranges sit around talking of days gone by.

RCMP Demolishes Barracks On Sitting Bull's Campsite

REGINA (CP)—Barrack Block B, built on Sitting Bull's campsite three years before the 1885 Riel Rebellion, is being taken down at the RCMP barracks here.

Hundreds of RCMP constables were quartered in the old block during training. At the start, it was typical of any British barracks from Regina to Singapore. Kit-bags were over the bed and a rifle was nearby.

The site-called Pile O'Bones, where Sitting Bull camped in 1881—was designed by Sir John A. Macdonald. He also listed the dimensions—it was to be large enough to hold four squads, or 140 men.

Two years after it was built, Louis Riel was hanged almost within its shadow.

Construction of a new barracks will start early next year.

Sun Glasses Menace In Driving at Night

BOSTON (UP)—Sun glasses can be a cause of death on the highway.

Jean O'Brien, an American Automobile Association official, said that "too many motorists forget to remove their glasses at night."

Others, she said, persist in the mistaken belief that tinted glasses will cut down the glare of approaching headlights.

"It may be true during the few seconds another car's headlights are shining directly in your eyes," she said, "but the moment the car passes you're nearly blind."

JUST WHAT SHE WANTED—THIS TIME

WEYMOUTH, Mass. (UP)—Mrs. William Carson Jr. received just what she wanted for her 35th birthday, but she says she'll be just as happy if there is not a repeat next year. Mrs. Carson gave birth to twin sons.

Jaycees Aid South Vietnam Refugees

Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce is participating in an international campaign to assist 700,000 homeless refugees in South Vietnam.

Jaycee president Stickney Harris said contributions may be made through churches, or may be mailed to the Junior Chamber of Commerce, Black Ball Building, Victoria.

The campaign has the support of city churches. It has been approved by Most Rev. H. E. Sexton, Archbishop of British Columbia; Rev. Dr. F. E. H. James, president of Victoria Ministerial Association, and Most Rev. James Hill, Roman Catholic Bishop of Victoria.

Campaign chairman Victor Smith said all campaign costs are borne by the junior chamber. He recalled that the group made a donation when the campaign was started last year by Jaycees in 57 countries.

The Canadian Junior Chamber has already sent more than $13,000. The cost of maintaining each of six medical teams for a month is $4,000. Mr. Harris said, "Each team consists of doctors, nurses and social workers who care for refugees fleeing south after the Indo-Chinese cease-fire."

"The last report is that more than 200,000 persons have been treated."

Secrecy Marks Arms Delivery To Egyptians

CAIRO, Egypt (UP)—A Russian ship carrying arms for Egypt docked Friday at Alexandria and unloaded its cargo at night, well-informed sources disclosed here.

Arms were unloaded by troops at night to insure secrecy on the types received.

The arms shipment presumably are part of the $80,000,000 arrangement by which Egypt agreed to barter cotton and other goods for Czech weapons and military equipment.

Meanwhile sources said yesterday that France, shipping arms to both sides in the troubled Middle East, may send Israel Mystere jets capable of coping with early-model Russian MIGs.

They said Israel has signed a contract for 15 Mysteres.

Woman's Body Found Submerged in Car

AGASSIZ, B.C. (CP)—The body of a woman, believed to be that of Christine Clouston, 26, who disappeared with her two brothers last May, was found submerged in a car in the Fraser River here.

The body of one brother, Otto, was recovered two months ago in the Fraser at Mission city.

Fritz Hoelt, owner of the car, is still missing.

The car was spotted in seven feet of water by a crew-member of the Agassiz-Rosedale ferry.

GO! GO! GO!—PINK

'Look Me Over--From the Neck Up'

By DONALD ZEO

Anita Ekberg, 24, the tall voluptuous Swedish star now being chased by every major film studio in the western world, flew into London yesterday to make a film. Customs men, airport officials and passengers turned, paused and gaped at this leggy 5-foot 7-inch beauty glided past in a close-fitting black jersey dress. And no wonder.

The blonde, blue-eyed Anita has elbowed all the top Hollywood glamour girls—including Meguro—way out into the cold. New York students voted her their "Dream Girl" of the year. Rome calls her "The Nuclear Bombshell." Even her ice-cold Sweden calls her "The Earthquake."

"So what if I am 39½, 23 and 36 hips," she pouted. "That is not everything." It must be something though... for the seams in her black dress had parted here and there. As she moved—like a languid cobra—diamonds flashed, bracelets jangled.

I went through the stock-taking with her. "This," she said, in her deep, husky voice, "is a solid gold bracelet with a topaz charm." "From..." "A friend. And this," she went on, "is another gold bracelet, with aquamarine stone... also platinum ring, and this 15-carat diamond ring."

"I bet they're from friends," I said, catching on fast. "So happens, yes," said Anita. "When I started in films I knew that what I was offering was body and not much soul. Nobody credited me with much brain," she said. "Now I have arrived I wish men would study me from the chin upwards."

So I switched upwards and report that Anita has lovely hair, ears, eyes, nose—and lips colored a most suitable shade of pink.

ANITA EKBERG

"What color?" I asked. "It's called 'Go! Go! Go! pink,'" she said, huskily.

IWA Local Elections Dec. 7

Nine persons have been nominated to fill nine executive positions in local IWA International Woodworkers of America (CIO-CIL) financial secretary Edwin Hays said Monday.

Balling among 1,600 members of the local will take place before Dec. 7 to elect the 1956 slate of officers.

Five candidates including president Jack MacKenzie, and Mr. Hays are seeking re-election. Mr. MacKenzie is running for his sixth term as president.

Others for re-election are recording secretary Sam Cook, conductor Cecil Taylor, and for first vice-president J. W. Hess, who this year was second vice-president.

Earle Pallister is nominated for second vice-president; Walter Pearson for third vice-president; Alex Stewart for warden; and Elsie Scheske for trustee.

DOESN'T PAY TO GET UP SOME DAYS

KENNEBEC, S.D. (UP)—Roland Arnoldy is convinced he should have spent at least one day in bed.

It was the day when he first found a sparrow's nest on the engine of his airplane. The same day the airplane stalled at 3,500 feet. The engine caught fire as the plane neared the ground and Arnoldy made a perfect landing.

Arnoldy then went fishing. The motorboat capsized. Arnoldy had to swim to an island.

Perhaps, he should have stayed in bed the next day, too, for in returning to the lake his car ran into a ditch.

Sewage Disposal Unit Unsited to Saanich

Municipal engineer H. D. Brown said it is "worth the trouble or time" to investigate the possibility of establishing a sewage disposal plant in Saanich for future development.

The engineer told the municipal council he does not think it would be economically practical.

He made these observations in reply to a letter from William Inglis, 2547 Sinclair, who claimed he has had some experience in the operation of sewage plants in England.

Mr. Inglis claimed if Saanich had accepted his proposal several years ago to ask the federal government for financial assistance to build a sewage disposal plant at Gordon Head camp, the municipality today would have a plant worth $300,000 serving homes in the district.

He pointed out the federal government has provided other provinces with financial assistance to construct sewage plants near army camps. He urged council to investigate the matter.

Mr. Inglis said one small sewage

BUT CAN THEY DO IT WITHOUT LEFTOVERS?

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UP)—William F. Lear, space travel enthusiast and board chairman of Lear, Inc., aircraft parts manufacturing firm, recently predicted man some day would travel by being broken down into sound vibrations and reassembled at his destination.

"Warning! Do not turn off. Bill Lear on way to Paris!"

MARGARET BACK HOME FROM SCOTLAND VISIT

LONDON (Reuters)—Princess Margaret returned to London by train from Scotland Tuesday after spending the weekend at the home of her cousin, the Master of Elphinstone, near Melgale in Perthshire.

The house was in morning when she left. The Master of Elphinstone's father, Lord Elphinstone, brother-in-law of the Queen Mother, died Monday in Edinburgh at 88.

The Master of Elphinstone, 41-year-old bachelor, is his heir.

Lady North Doker gets resounding kiss from Billy Hill self-styled ex-gangster leader of London's underworld after a fabulous party he threw recently in a Soho restaurant. Many of the guests were self-confessed crooks and mobsters.

HER LADYSHIP IS MIFFED

No More TV for Norah, She Resents Publicity

LONDON (Reuters)—Lady Norah Doker, wife of a wealthy British industrialist, Monday refused to appear on television because she resented critics calling her "the last of Mayfair's red-hot mommas."

She cancelled a broadcast she was due to make on Britain's commercial TV Thursday, because of newspaper criticism of a program last week from her country home.

The 48-year-old peeress, favorite of London gossip columnists, said: "I do not want to wake up in the morning and read nasty things like 'Lady D's dazzle was dimmed' and references to me as 'the last of Mayfair's red-hot mommas'."

Last week Lady Doker hit headlines by attending a party given by Billy Hill, self-styled boss of Britain's underworld, to launch the publication of his memoirs.

A fish and wildlife service ship is scheduled to pick up survivors about December 11, the coast guard said.

The coast guard said Capt. Freeman Lang radiated that the 65-foot ship which had been trapped in the coral reef at Palmyra Island since Wednesday.

Nordegg Diaries Given To Canada's Archives

OTTAWA (CP)—The memoirs of German-born Martin Nordegg, Canadian financier, explorer and collector who died in 1948, have been turned over to the Public Archives by his widow.

The documents include about 500 typewritten pages of notes about the places he saw and the people he met in his journey in northern Ontario, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Nordegg, who came to Canada in 1906, was one of the pioneers of the northern Ontario mining industry. He was also involved in the development of the northern Alberta town of Nordegg, named after him.

Mrs. Nordegg, who now lives in New York, has also undertaken to search for her late husband's collection of maps and voluminous correspondence—some of it with former Prime Minister Sir Wilfrid Laurier—and present them to the Archives.

Masonic Choir Impresses Large Audience

A small Masonic choir, conducted by Cyril C. Warren, provided pleasurable entertainment Tuesday evening for a near-capacity audience at Sir James Douglas School Auditorium.

Choral groups were interspersed with solo numbers by Ruth Champion, soprano, and Bernard Rain, violinist.

Mrs. Champion, whose attractive stage presence enhances her lovely voice, was particularly successful in the Puccini aria, "Si Mi Chiamano Mimì". The quality of her upper register notes was revealed as pure and fine and her production throughout was flexible.

HAPPY CHOICE

Another number which suited her voice and was sung with excellent control and a delightful lifting effect, was the waltz song, "Carmina". In her encore also—"Comin' Thro the Rye"—and "Whistle and I'll Come to You"—her choice was most happy.

Bernard Rain is a fine serious young musician—and his playing has qualities of sincerity, intellect and taste.

His selections were effectively contrasted and he displayed an excellent sense of phrase and graceful bowing in the Mozart Minuet and Chopin Nocturne.

The sprightly "Elfen Dance" of Jenkinson was evidence that he is in no way lacking in flexibility and technical adroitness. He was accompanied by Miss Dorothy Francis.

FINE EXAMPLE

Attack and phrasing were outstanding attributes of the choir. They also succeeded admirably in establishing mood and atmosphere.

Of their numbers, the 18th century "Come, Let's Be Merry" was one of the best, being well within the scope of the choir's present size and range. It was altogether a fine example of a capella singing.

Diction was excellent in "A Wet Sheet and a Flowing Sea" and an ideal balance was attained in "Allah's Holiday". Also successful were Bantok's "Silent Strings" and the concluding Schubert number, "Thou Art Repose".

George Peaker was the choir's accompanist.

Top-Bracket Civil Servants Get Pay Boost

OTTAWA (BUP)—About 50 of Canada's top-bracket civil servants made plans for an extra Merry Christmas today on the strength of salary increases that have been backdated to July 1.

It was announced Tuesday the federal officials who rank immediately below deputy ministers and get a minimum of $9,000 a year would be given the raises which follow similar boosts for deputy ministers.

Lower-level civil servants, represented by the Civil Service Federation of Canada, would not be affected. The federation has been negotiating for a general salary increase for all civil servants for several months.

The new rates boosted assistant deputy ministers' pay to $12,000 a year, directors of certain branches to $11,000, and heads of other branches from $9,000 to $10,000. They work in the departments of national revenue, customs branch, trade and commerce, agriculture, northern affairs, transport and civil service commission.

FIRST JET CAR?

This is the fastest car in the world according to its owner. It's a 1937 model to which John Shelburne of Hannibal, Mo., has bolted six jet engines. Probably the country's first jet car, it was built to help Shelburne experiment with heat exchangers, afterburners, power-booster nozzles and a few extra items he had to invent to make "The Thing" work.

'FAMILIAR TREADMILL'

Martin Again Defends Hospital 'Wage Freeze'

VANCOUVER (CP)—Health Minister Eric Martin blamed the recent wage freeze in hospitals on the disproportionate rising costs of the B.C. hospital insurance system when he addressed the Automotive Retailers' Association banquet Tuesday night.

"The cost of the scheme to the government has risen by 80 per cent in the last four years," he said.

During this period hospital wages were steadily increasing, said Mr. Martin, but the government was loathe to clamp down until the last year when $29,000,000 was required to take care of costs as compared to $16,000,000 the first year.

"Our health scheme is the best in Canada," said the health minister, "but we must try to keep it within proportion to other government expenditures."

"Otherwise," he said, "we will be involved in the familiar old treadmill, higher taxes to meet rising costs, and higher wages to meet higher taxes."

Good Deeds Buy Things In Chicago

CHICAGO (UP)—A store that sells things for good deeds instead of money opened recently under the sponsorship of the Old Town-Chicago Boys' Clubs with about 1,000 neighborhood boys as members.

If a boy wants to buy a pair of gym shoes, for instance, he may pile up credit tokens in a variety of ways—by washing floors, emptying waste baskets, running errands, aiding in the city's current clean-up campaign, or even by improving his grades at school.

The credits will buy goods ranging from bicycles to cans of pork and beans.

There are a lot of poor kids in our neighborhood," said Vince Geisler, club director. "Instead of just giving the stuff away, we're making them work for it. Nothing destroys the dignity of a boy so much as to accept handouts."

David X. Meyers, garage owner and chairman of the board of the club said merchandise for the store was donated by local businessmen.

LONDON POLICE SCANDAL

Bribed Detective Jailed for 2 Years

LONDON (Reuters)—A London detective and two other men were sentenced to jail Tuesday for taking evidence in a vain bid to clear a burglar.

Detective-sergeant James Robertson, 40, and Ben Canter, 49, a lawyer, got two years each. The third man, Morris (Spider) Page, 58, described by the judge, Lord Chief Justice Goddard, as "just a common crook," was given a 15-month term.

They were said to have cooked up a defence for a Maltese, Joseph Grech, who was found with a key to burgled premises. Robertson was said to have been bribed to lend Canter and Page the key so that they could have a lock fitted to Grech's own door which it would open. Grech was in fact jailed but his statements in prison sparked off new inquiries.

Nerve Weakness

How common is it among men and women over a certain age?

Nerve Weakness—Nervous Exhaustion. There are many words for it, including the Greek word Neurasthenia, meaning Nerve Weakness—a term often used to describe a condition that can affect many people over forty. After that age, you may complain of being easily tired. You feel "all in," irritable, moody, poor appetite. At such times, many people wisely turn to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for dependable help.

How long should you take Dr. Chase's Nerve Food?

It may have taken months for your body to become "run-down," sending distress signals many people call "nerves." Although Dr. Chase's Nerve Food helps to build up Nerve energy quickly, for best results you should take Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for at least 6 weeks. This gives your body a chance to get the full benefit of the Iron, Vitamin B-1 and other valuable medical ingredients in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

At the end of 6 weeks you must be able to say to yourself: "I feel like a new person..." or we'll refund every penny you paid. Why not get started today?

Canadian Drys Irked By U.S. Beercasts

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Temperance Federation resolved Tuesday to ask the United States Federal Communications Commission to put an end to the "sabotaging of Canadian anti-liquor advertising laws by beercasts on Buffalo television and radio stations."

"The federation, here for its annual meeting, adopted a suggestion by a U.S. temperance advocate, Dr. Caradine Hooton of Washington, D.C., that it help him do something about the problem."

It also heard a claim by Mrs. Ross Eaton of Sackville, N.B., that members of some Baptist women's groups are among the 64 per cent of Canadian women who drink.

Mrs. Eaton, wife of a Baptist minister, said:

"I have even heard that members of our missionary societies are drinking. I was told by one friend that they are even giving cocktail parties."

Dr. Hooton, executive secretary of the Methodist Board of Temperance in the U.S., said Monday night he is shocked to think that Ontario's "fine laws" on liquor and beer advertising are being weakened by programs originating in U.S. radio and television stations.

Ontario legislation permits beer and liquor manufacturers to place only institutional-type advertising in newspapers and other media.

JAPAN HOPES TO OUST U.K. AS BUYER OF CANADIAN WHEAT

WINNIPEG (CP)—Dr. Koto Matsudaira, Japanese ambassador to Canada, said Tuesday that within 20 years his country would displace the United Kingdom as Canada's chief wheat export market.

Dr. Matsudaira based his prediction, during an interview, on the rapid growth of the Japanese population, increasing taste of the Japanese for bread in place of rice and the rapid improvement of Japanese sales to Canada.

Churchill Familiar Cheery Self On Brief Birthday Appearance

LONDON (CP)—Sir Winston Churchill flashed a cheery grin and gave the old V-for-Victory sign today to show that he is still enjoying life at 81.

Photographers and movie cameramen of the world's press grouped round the Georgian-style home in Hyde Park Gate for the statesman's promised birthday appearance this morning.

A butler opened the door and Churchill, wearing his favorite blue polka-dot bow tie and morning suit, came to the doorway with Lady Churchill.

Both smiled broadly, greeted everybody with a bright "good morning" and waved as cameramen and bystanders called "happy birthday."

But the couple did not stay long outside in the damp London fog. After a brief appearance they called "goodbye" and vanished inside for a quiet family celebration.

WINSTON AND "CLEM"—messages pour in.

VALUES KIND WISHES

Churchill announced that he had received far more greetings—"from friends known and unknown to me in this country and all over the world"—than he could answer personally.

"I hope that everyone who has been so kind as to remember my anniversary today will know how much pleasure it has given me to receive their good wishes and how highly I value their thought of me."

"I trust they will excuse me if I do not send them my thanks in writing."

Personal messages from the Queen and other members of the Royal Family topped a deluge of mail which the old statesman's secretary described as "simply fantastic."

Relays of postmen and messengers brought parcels and letters.

One massive bouquet of carnations and orchids was fashioned into an artist's palette and brushes.

By Churchill's own wish there were no special celebrations—"just a quiet luncheon party for the family and a few friends," his secretary said.

As she has for the last 16 years, Hungarian-born Mrs. Frederick Eloris, a Soho pastry cook, baked the cake. This time it was in the shape of a straw "boat"—the hat traditionally worn by undergraduates of Harrow, Sir Winston's school.

Atop the hat was a replica of the town crier's bell of reconstructed Williamsburg, Va., the old British colonial capital in the United States. The bell carried the inscription: "He brought new strength to the belief in human liberty and dignity of the individual."

Inside the bell was a surprise packet, a pouch with a drawing bearing the call of the roulette croupier, "faissez vos jeux (place your stakes)."

SECRET GIFT

"What's inside the packet is a private matter between Lady Churchill and myself," Mrs. Eloris told a reporter.

Next Wednesday Sir Winston will go to Drapers' Hall to receive another replica of the town crier's bell and a cheque for £10,000, the Williamsburg award created by the trustees of the Virginia town for "outstanding achievements in advancing basic principles of liberty and justice."

"The great man is 81 today," said The Daily Mail in a brief front-page editorial. "We mean, of course, Sir Winston Churchill. Who else could be immediately identified by that simple but all-embracing description?"

'PEACH MELBA' ORIGINATOR DIED WEALTHY

LONDON (AP)—A hotel hall porter, who was credited with giving the dessert peach Melba its name, left £20,000 ($56,000) in his will published Tuesday.

Joseph H. H. Meyer, a 65-year-old Swiss who died last September, worked 45 years in London hotels.

His daughter, Mrs. Constance Matheson, explained about peach Melba:

"When by father was at the Carlton—he was there for 18 years before going to Grosvenor House—he made friends with the chef Escoffier. . . . One night my father suggested that a dish be produced in honor of Madame Melba, the Australian singer. Together my father and Escoffier invented peach Melba, vanilla ice cream, sliced peaches and a syrupy sauce."

Lavish tips helped Meyer build up a fortune.

The trustee of the Churchill birthday presentation fund launched to mark his 80th birthday announced Tuesday night that it had been closed with £259,175 6s 7d collected. Some 300,000 contributions ranged from a penny to cheques for £5,000.

ALTERNATIVE VOTE BLAMED FOR LOSSES

Return to Simple Ballot Planned by Alberta Socreds

By PHIL ADLER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON (CP)—Alberta's complicated system of voting in provincial elections will be scrapped when the Election Act is revised, it is reliably reported.

Proposals probably will be submitted to the legislature during the 1956 session which opens in February.

Alberta is the only province which has three different voting systems. A combination of proportional representation and the single transferable vote system is used in provincial elections while Albertans voting in federal elections use the simple ballot.

Informants say Alberta will follow Manitoba and adopt the simple ballot. Official feeling is that a committee will be set up to split the only multiple-member ridings—Edmonton and Calgary.

Manitoba ended proportional representation and the Alternative vote during the 1955 session of the legislature and set up a committee to investigate redistribution of multiple-member constituencies.

Political sources agree that in the June 29 provincial general election Liberal, Progressive Conservative and CCF voters distributed their alternative choices among the opposition parties—and withheld them from Social Credit, which thus lost ground when second, third or further counts were necessary.

In the election, the Liberal party increased its strength to 15 members compared with four at dissolution, the gains coming mainly at the expense of Premier Manning's government which went back for a sixth consecutive term but lost 14 seats.

Thirteen Social Credit losses were registered in single-member rural constituencies which used the transferable ballot, also known as the alternative vote, where voters rate candidates in order of preference—1, 2, 3 and so on.

Under the system, a candidate must have a majority of votes cast to be elected on first count. If more than one count is needed the low man is dropped and his ballots are distributed among others on a second-choice basis.

Opposition parties urged voters to give Social Credit candidates low ratings and in some constituencies combined to support independent candidates running against government supporters.

Returns from the general election show that Social Credit would have retained another four seats had the simple ballot system been used—where the candidate who receives the largest number of votes is elected and there is only one count.

As it turned out, the four Social Credit standard-bearers—including former provincial treasurer C. E. Gerhart—led on the count of first choices but were defeated in subsequent counts.

However, had the simple ballot been used in Edmonton and Calgary instead of the proportional representation system, Social Credit would have dropped two seats—both in Edmonton.

Rogers Pass Route Encouraging—Winters

Both the federal and provincial governments are "encouraged" at the prospect of carving the last remaining link of the Trans-Canada Highway in B.C. through Rogers Pass, between Revelstoke and Golden, Federal Works Minister Robert Winters said today.

Mr. Winters said initial surveys on the route are "promising," and that Ottawa would favor its selection as one of the "gaps" in the national highway to be filled by the minister's recent offer of 90 per cent of construction costs.

The offer, made at the recent T.C. conference in Ottawa, calls for the federal government to pay 90 per cent of cost on 10 per cent of remaining construction in all provinces.

B.C. was faced with the difficulty of bridging the gap between Revelstoke and Golden on the T.C. The Big Bend route is in the way of huge hydro-electric projects planned for the area.

Surveys are now underway on the Rogers Pass route, with the federal government splitting the cost of them with B.C. Selection of the route would mean that Ottawa would pay 100 per cent of the construction costs for 20 miles through Glacier National Park, out of a total of 90 miles.

On the remaining 70 miles, Ottawa would pay 90 cents on the dollar.

LITTLE SUPPORT

Mr. Winters did not indicate much support for B.C. Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi's recent demand for $7,500,000 from the federal government

SPEAKS TONIGHT

Federal Works Minister Robert Winters will address the Laurier Club at the Monterey at 6.15 tonight. His speech will be re-broadcast at 9.05 to-night over radio station CKDA. Following the Laurier address, the minister will go to Liberal party headquarters on Government Street to meet party supporters in the Greater Victoria area.

Improved driving record of Victorians brought a sharp drop in car insurance rates today, on the eve of the continent-wide Safe-Driving Day Thursday.

B.C. Underwriters' Association announced from Vancouver an overall reduction of 14 per cent in 1956 premiums for Victoria car owners. The changes go into effect Jan. 1.

This follows a 17 per cent reduction last year for this area and compares with a provincial average of 7 per cent reduction in 1956 for private passenger cars and 9 per cent reduction for commercial vehicles.

MAINLAND HIGHER

The new rates, effective Jan. 1, mean that car insurance will cost Victoria motorists about half that paid such B.C. interior cities as Nelson, Trail and Prince George.

Some drivers, particularly those in the Fraser Valley, will face increases next year. But an analysis of rates of member companies of the BCUA indicates the accident-free driver is going to get even more encouragement from insurance companies.

"About 55 per cent of B.C. car owners will be affected by two major changes to be implemented by board companies which write about one-half of the province's car insurance," a BCUA spokesman said. They are:

BONUS BOOSTED

1. Drivers eligible for the "preferred" risk rating plan with three-year claims-free records will benefit from 25 per cent discounts next year instead of 20 per cent as in recent years.

2. A new two-year claims-free class has been established and drivers in this group will get, for the first time, 15 per cent discounts.

Although male drivers under 25 continue to show the highest accident rate in insurance records, BCUA officials announced that premium recognition will be given as a result of the "comparative stability of young men who are married before reaching the 25-year mark."

They will in future be placed in a lower rating classification.

RATES COMPARED

Comparative changes in premium costs throughout British Columbia are illustrated by these examples affecting the LA driver (pleasure car with no under-25 male driver in family) of a late model Chevrolet, Ford or Plymouth who has a three-year accident-free record:

An owner in Greater Victoria paid $41.10 in 1955 for typical five-point coverage of $5,000 to $10,000 bodily injury, $1,000 property damage, $100 deductible collision, fire and theft. The same coverage will cost $34 next year—a saving of $7.10.

A similar situation in the Upper Island would mean a reduction of from $48.40 to $42.70, a drop of $5.70. In Greater Vancouver cost of such coverage will drop from $58.10 to $54.30, a saving of $4.80.

Plans to cut insurance rates for Ontario and Quebec motorists were also announced today. The Canadian Underwriters' Association said average rate reductions of 6 per cent for private cars and 10 per cent for commercial vehicles in Ontario, and 9 and 4 per cent respectively in Quebec, would be effective January 1.

Faure Moves To Sidetrack House Defeat

Dissolution Would Force Vote

PARIS (AP)—The French cabinet scheduled a meeting today to decide whether to dissolve the National Assembly in a rare manoeuvre which would give Premier Edgar Faure the early elections Parliament denied him.

Holding a confidence vote on a procedural question—but actually moving to stage off the early parliamentary balloting—the assembly overthrew the government Tuesday night, 318 to 218. But by their whopping majority against Faure, the over-enthusiastic deputies made it possible for the cabinet to oust them from office under a constitutional clause never applicable before.

Article 51 of the 1946 constitution says that when two cabinets have been thrown out within 18 months by "constitutional majorities"—more than half the assembly's 625 members—the cabinet can dissolve the assembly. Pierre Mendes-France was ousted from the premiership less than 10 months ago.

The constitution says the cabinet's decision to dissolve must be taken with the president of the republic presiding and after advice has been received from the president of the assembly.

MEET FOR HOUR

Pierre Schmitter, assembly president, spent more than an hour Tuesday night with President Rene Coty at Elysee Palace. Reports said Schmitter declined to give his advice until after consultations with party leaders in the assembly today. After these talks he said he would make his recommendations to Coty in a letter.

The cabinet then could decide whether to order the assembly dissolved or merely hand in its own resignation.

Weighing against assembly dissolution is the constitutional requirement that new elections be held within 20 to 30 days. That would put the balloting around Christmas, a time certain to be unpopular with the voters.

Argentine Frees Famed Newspaper

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—The government today issued a decree restoring the newspaper La Prensa to the Paz family. At the same time it ordered dissolution of the Peronista party.

The decree of provisional president Pedro Aramburu spelled a finish to the totalitarian political machine which Juan D. Peron organized six years ago to smother the opposition and tighten his reign. Expropriation of La Prensa in 1951 was one of the steps Peron took to clamp his control on the nation.

The return of the 81-year-old newspaper to its rightful owners came only 18 days after Aramburu took office.

SEIZED FIVE YEARS AGO

Almost five years ago, the Peron government engineered its expropriation by Congress and handed it over to his organized labor supporters.

Its publisher before expropriation, Dr. Alberto Gainza Paz, is expected to return from exile Thursday to resume control of the newspaper.

The Aramburu decree ordered the federal administrator at the paper to turn over all properties to Gainza Paz, abolished the expropriation law of 1950 and ordered all legal proceedings against the Paz family dropped.

It is expected the newspaper will be closed down for inventory for several days before it resumes publication.

Several times since Peron's downfall in the September revolution it has been reported that the provisional government would abolish the Peronista party.

When Peron fell, his party held all seats in the Senate and all but 12 in the 155-seat Chamber of Deputies, virtually all judgeships and nearly all local and provincial posts.

Change in Plan Asked

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C. (CP)—City council of this north-central British Columbia port will attempt to persuade Frohisher-Ventures Ltd. to use Prince Rupert as the outlet for its proposed $50,000,000 hydro power and metals industry, rather than Alice Arm, B.C.

LA PRENSA'S RETURN SALUTED HERE

The Argentine flag was hoisted to the flagpole of the Victoria Press building today to salute the return of La Prensa, the famous Buenos Aires paper, to the ranks of the world's free press. Ceremony was performed by Stuart Keate, Times publisher, who is Canadian representative on the freedom of the press committee of the Inter-American Press Association.

$1,200,000 Sidney Breakwater Asked in Brief to Minister

A Sidney delegation today presented a brief to federal works minister Robert Winters asking for construction of a $1,200,000 breakwater and other marine facilities.

The delegation was led by M. R. Eaton, president of the Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce, and H. Bradley, chairman of the village commission.

Major-General G. R. Pearkes, VC, MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, and Victoria MP Dr. F. T. Fairley supported the brief.

It called for construction of a breakwater to protect the port, immediate construction of a ramp leading to the wharf with a larger capacity, installation of additional dolphins to permit ferries to land in all weather, and construction of protected floats to handle visiting yachts.

Mr. Winters drove to Sidney following presentation of the brief, to get a first-hand look at the situation.

The Sidney delegation stressed the need for a new federal building in the growing village, and said that existing post office facilities "act as a serious deterrent" to expansion.

It said the facilities for yachts are "judiciously inadequate," and that valuable visiting vessels are "in peril" when they put in at Sidney.

Paris Dentists 'Out'

PARIS (Reuters)—Paris dentists today pinned on their doors the address of the nearest hospital and went on strike for 24 hours.

The dentists were protesting against payments fixed by the French social security system for their work which, they claim, are too low.

Eden Lays Down Basis for Talks With U.S., Russia

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Eden said today the government is "perfectly ready to consider" Russia's proposal for an immediate world-wide ban on nuclear weapon tests, but cautioned Parliament against expecting unconditional British acceptance.

Eden told the Commons the terms and scope of the Russian offer, broadcast by Moscow radio, "are far from clear."

Russia offered to halt nuclear weapon tests if Britain and the United States would do the same.

Eden said the Soviet offer "might have appeared in a better light if it had been made before the recent Soviet explosion of which Mr. Khrushchev has spoken in such enthusiastic terms."

He referred to the comments by Nikita Khrushchev, Soviet Communist party secretary, in India last Saturday that Russia recently exploded a hydrogen bomb which confirmed calculations that Russian scientists "are able to produce with minimum atomic energy a maximum explosion."

WON'T COMMIT CABINET

Eden refused to commit the government to accepting or rejecting the Labor party proposal that Britain should initiate talks with the United States and Russia with a view to ending further experimental H-bomb tests.

The prime minister was answering a question from Clement Aitken, leader of the Labor party.

Earlier, 16 Labor MPs submitted a resolution calling on the government to halt further atomic and hydrogen bomb tests and to urge the United States and Russia to do likewise.

In his reply, Eden said Russia has made no official approach to Britain on the subject.

Eden went on: "Her Majesty's government are ready to discuss these matters at any time, but I must make it clear that in such discussions regard will have to be paid to the number and nature of the tests which each country has already made."

He added amid the cheers of his own supporters: "It remains the view of Her Majesty's government that a comprehensive disarmament agreement is the only final solution to these problems."

TOTAL BAN SOVIET GOAL—KRUSHCHEV

CALCUTTA (Reuters)—Nikita Khrushchev, visiting Russian Communist party chief, said today his government aims to compel the West to ban atomic weapons.

He told a public meeting that the Soviet Union stands for a ban on armaments, including atomic and hydrogen weapons, but that her policy has not received proper support from Western countries.

U.K. Papers Favor Plan

LONDON (AP)—The renewed Soviet proposal for world-wide renunciation of further H-bomb tests drew support today from several British newspapers.

The News Chronicle and The Daily Herald, Liberal and Labor supporters, respectively, urge acceptance of the Soviet proposal, made via Moscow radio Tuesday.

Another Liberal paper, The Manchester Guardian, expresses approval of a "limited" agreement to cease nuclear bomb tests provided it is not dependent on prior conclusion of a comprehensive disarmament agreement.

The Daily Telegraph, Conservative, notes cautiously that a proposal to stop H-bomb tests "for some time has been part of Russian disarmament schemes. But cessation of tests was always put forward as part of a 'package deal,' the concluding phase of which would be abolition of nuclear weapons."

U.S. Ambassador Winthrop Aldrich presented the medallion bearing the Eisenhower portrait to Britain's "grand old man" as a token of America's "undying gratitude."

The medallion was accompanied by a message from the President hailing the retired Prime Minister as "a towering leader in the quest for peace as you were in the battle for freedom through the dark days of war."

JUDGE RULES SHE CAN

Be He Ever So Wary She'll Still be Stary

CHICAGO (AP)—A judge has given Harriet Davis permission to attend any church she pleases, thus freeing her to hunt down an organist who can't stand the way she stares at him.

The case of the reluctant organist and the staring spinster had been in court for the last nine months. Tuesday Judge Julius Miner dissolved an injunction which prevented Miss Davis, 35, from attending any church where organist Robert Metzler, 50, is employed.

Metzler obtained the injunction last March, charging that Miss Davis and her mother followed him from church to church, sat in front pews and stared at him.

This made him fidgety and he skipped notes in hymns, he said. Metzler said he quit his job in a Chicago church and found employment at a church in suburban Glenview to get away from the women, but that they followed him there. The women simply explained that Metzler's music affects them.

"I have an entirely different emotional reaction when I hear him play," Miss Davis said. Judge Miner declared:

"If there is any disturbance in the church, the church has its remedies in the police courts, not by injunctions. I have no power to keep people out of church, regardless of their motives."
